LABOR.

Third Day of the National Congress at Philadelphia.

Communication from the Workingmen of London.

Address of the Colored Delegates to the Convention.

Refusal to Receive Miss Anthony's Credentials.

LETTER FROM HON. FRANK P. BLAIR, SR.

From Our Special Correspondent.

PHILADELPHIA, Wednesday, Aug. 18, 1869.

The Convention was called to order at 9 A. M., President LUCKER in the chair. After the reading of the minutes, Mr. A. W. PHELPS, of Connecticut, announced that he presented a document written by a Western delegate as to land and money monopolies. He desired it to be printed for the information of the Convention. Objection was made by Mr. TREWELLICK, of Michigan, as to giving the leave of this body to print, without first referring the documents to appropriate committees for examination. The communication was referred to the Committee on Platform; and by a subsequent motion, it was ordered that hereafter all communications be referred to appropriate committees for report, without being read to the Convention.

The Chair announced the appointment of the following committees: On Obnoxious Laws; on Cooperation; on Prison Labor; on Co-ole Labor; on Female Labor; on Labor Organ; Auditing; Committee on Printing.

Mr. SHELDON, of Missouri, announced that he had a letter from Hon. F. P. BLAIR, Sr., addressed to Mr. MCGUIRE, executive officer of this Congress for the State of Kansas, touching the most important subject that can come before this body—the money question.

Mr. HORACE DAY, of New-York, desired to have the letter read, but the Chair decided that, in accordance with the terms of the motion lately passed, it could not be read, as it was a communication not even addressed to this body. The document was finally referred to the Committee on Platform, without being read.

Mr. WM. WEST, who represents an organization known as the "Political Commonwealth," said that he had a communication he desired to read. The Chair decided he could not read it, under the ruling just made. A stormy discussion ensued at this point, a large number of delegates being anxious to know the contents of the paper, and Mr. WEST making continual efforts to get his document before the Convention. Finally it came out that the communication was in the form of a resolution, and it looked at one time as if the "readers" would carry their point, but on putting the question to vote it was decided in the negative.

On motion of Mr. JOHN WALSH, of New-York, in order to avoid confusion in the future, it was decided that a Committee of three be appointed to whom all resolutions and communications be referred, and by them placed in charge of appropriate committees for investigation and report.

Mr. H. J. WALES, of Pennsylvania, offered a resolution, which, by unanimous consent, was read, asking for the appointment of a Committee of three to investigate into and report what action should be taken by this body in regard to the troubles now existing between the coal miners and mine-owners in Schuylkill County, in this State. The resolution was adopted, and the following named gentlemen appointed as such Committee: EDWARD D. GARDAR, of Pennsylvania, JOHN WALSH, of New-York, and A. M. PURDY, of Indiana.

On motion of Mr. DAY, of New-York, the Special Committee was empowered to refer back to the Convention any communication or resolution that, in their judgment, might be more directly before it for investigation.

A Pennsylvania delegate moved that in future all questions be voted on by means of a show of hands instead of ayes and noes. He thought such a course would prevent much noise and confusion.

Mr. M. R. WALSH, of Typographical Union No. 6, of New-York, remarked that he would like to see a show of hands, in view of the fact that there were here delegates from political associations, and officers of banking institutions, and such like, the appearance of the hands raised in a convention purporting to be composed of workingmen would be an interesting feature.

The motion was negatived, however, by a decided majority.

Mr. ISAAC MYERS, (colored,) of Maryland, said that he had an address prepared by the colored delegates to this Congress which he wished to read. He would not take up the time of the Convention at this stage of the proceedings, however; but asked the privilege of reading the document during the last quarter of an hour of this morning's session. Leave to read was granted unanimously.

Communications were then read from the officers of the Executive Committee from Nebraska, Mississippi and North Carolina, setting forth the condition of labor interests in those States. They were referred to the President and Executive Committee to be hereafter appointed.

The following communication from the International Labor Congress of England, asking this Congress to send a delegate to the Swiss International Convention, was then read:

INTERNATIONAL WORKINGMEN'S ASSOCIATION,
GENERAL COUNCIL, No. 256 ELIZA HOUSE,
W. C., LONDON, July 26, 1869.

To the President of the National Labor Union of the United States:

DEAR SIR: I am directed to inform you that the General Council of the International Workingmen's Association has resolved to invite the National Labor Union, of the United States, to send a delegate to the next Congress of this Association, to be held at Basle, in Switzerland, on and after the 6th day of September next, and I hereby invite the National Labor Union accordingly, to send a representative to that Congress. I shall feel very proud to be elected as President of that Union to bring this invitation under the notice of those whom it concerns. A delegate starting at the close of your Congress will be in time for the opening of ours. I need not remind you that the mutual influence such a representation would have, particularly as your delegate would be furnished with the latest collective resolves and determinations of the sons and daughters of toil in the New World, which are always anxiously looked for and fully appreciated in the Old. There is a further reason why Europe should strain a point to send a delegate—the emigration mania. Once a year during our Congress week all the scribes of Europe are busy with our doings. A sketch of what things are in the New World, given by an accredited agent, not only find its way into the papers, but would greatly tend to dissipate many of their illusions of the happiness in store for them if they could only manage to cross the big lake. It is the policy of those who have an interest in keeping them as they are, to induce as many as possible to leave, since their very presence counteracts the tendency of the existing villainy, and in the New World they are used to perpetuate the existing villainy and their presence tends to hamper, if not to frustrate, the onward march of the labor movement. Your experience in the European continent, the disappointed speculators, military enterprises and the roughs and villains from Europe, the surviving physically and morally demoralized, degenerated and degraded wretches ejected from China, among in hopeless despair and destitution, may bring new troubles upon the working class of the United States. A close union and construction of those who know what they are about in both hemispheres may, if not avert the impending calamity, at least be able so to mitigate it that no actual stoppage occur in the march to the goal to which all our efforts are directed to complete emancipation of the toilers from the thraldom of capital. The monster swindlers who profit by the existing state of things are sure to take every advantage unless we keep vigilantly on the lookout. To do this effectually a closer union than we have hitherto had is necessary. To bring it about nothing is better calculated than personal intercourse, face to face deliberation. If we will, we can; we must succeed, only the bonds of labor's brotherhood must be drawn tighter, and one of the means would be a representative of your Union at our Congress. Yours faithfully, J. GEORGE ECCARIUS,
General Secretary.

Considerable discussion ensued as to sending a delegate as requested in the above communication, in which ROBERT BUTCHART, of New-York, and CHARLES MCLEAN, of Massachusetts, had a tilt on the question whether in any event the trades' unions would become "disintegrated" by political action, that expression having been used by Mr. MCLEAN yesterday in his argument in favor of Miss ANTHONY's admission as a delegate.

Mr. MCLEAN, who is decidedly a woman's rights advocate, reiterated his opinion that when the eight-hour movement is firmly established, and all the objects for which the laboring masses are now contending are gained, there will be no further necessity for trades' unions; but while he said this he wished to be considered as second to no man in his advocacy of all the rights of labor, nor in any way wanting in doing all in his power to forward the interests of the working classes. He believed that the time was coming when the principles now advocated by labor organizations would be elevated to the sphere of political action, and by that means made successful. Then trades' unions would be disintegrated of necessity.

Mr. BUTCHART contended that so long as laboring classes existed the unions would be a necessity. As for the political balloons that some gentlemen seemed to think would take their place, he believed they would all explode and find an existence only in the gas they produced.

The vote was then taken on referring the communication from England to the President and Executive Committee for report, and decided in the affirmative.

Another attempt was now made to get the communication of Hon. F. P. BLAIR read before the Convention, but it failed. During the discussion which ensued, Mr. JOHN MAGUIRE, of Missouri, said that General B. F. BUTLER told him in Washington that the workingmen's view of the money question, if agitated during the last Presidential election, would have defeated the Republican Party. "We wouldn't let you discuss it," said Mr. BUTLER. "When you attempted to do so, we cried out, 'Copperhead' and 'rebel,' and by this means squelched you." He (General BUTLER) admitted to the speaker that the policy advocated by the last Labor Congress on this point, was the true one, and it would finally triumph.

Mr. M. R. WALSH, of New-York Typographical Union No. 6, asked as a matter of privilege to be allowed to read the following telegraphic dispatch, which he had just received:

NEW-YORK, Aug. 18, 1869.

M. R. Walsh, Delegate to the National Labor Congress, Philadelphia:

If Miss ANTHONY is admitted, you are directed to withdraw from the Convention, informing them that it is the mouth of Union No. 6, and we will remember it. We are opposed to humbugs.
WILLIAM STIRK,
President Typographical Union No. 6.

Mr. WALSH said that, in accordance with the directions embodied in this dispatch, he respectfully asked to have his credentials returned to him.

Mr. DAVID POWERS, of Massachusetts, moved that the gentleman have leave to withdraw.

Mr. Q. B. DAILEY, of Ohio, moved to amend, "and that the tax paid by the delegate from New-York be refunded to him."

This gave rise to an animated discussion, in which Mr. MCLEAN, of Massachusetts, was again taken to task for having called the trades unions a "forlorn hope," and was brought to his feet in defence. He reiterated the same views he had heretofore expressed.

Pending the discussion, the following address, prepared by the colored delegates for presentation to this Convention, and by a vote this morning, appointed to be heard at 11:45 M., was then read by Mr. ISAAC MYERS, (colored,) of Maryland. The whole Convention listened to the reader with the most profound attention and in perfect silence. Mr. MYERS, who is a light-colored mulatto, a ship carpenter, from Baltimore, read the document in a full, round voice, with proper emphasis, and in a clear and distinct manner. The reading was at times interrupted with applause, and at its close many delegates advanced and warmly congratulated him. The address was ordered to be printed, and the hour of 12 o'clock having arrived, the Convention adjourned till 2 P. M.

ADDRESS OF THE COLORED DELEGATES.

The following is the address of the Colored Delegates to the National Labor Congress:

Mr. President and Members of the National Labor Convention:

GENTLEMEN: It would be an act of great injustice to your Godlike charity should I allow the deliberations of this Convention to close without returning you the thanks of four millions of our race for your unanimous recognition of their right to representation in this Convention. We sympathize with you in the loss of your great leader and champion, the immortal WILLIAM H. SYLVIS. God in his wisdom has called him to "that bourne whence no traveler returns," and our prayers shall ever be that his immortal spirit shall ever hover around the Throne, and bathe its wings in the morning dews of Heaven. He labored incessantly for you and your posterity. No distance was too far for him to travel. No hours of labor were too long for him to work while he advocated eight hours for you—eight hours for rest, eight hours for study, and eight hours for work. He gave all of his hours in laboring to bring about that glorious result. His heart, soul, mind and strength were absorbed in his labor of love, and to-day, by one stroke of the mighty pen of President U. S. GRANT, you are enjoying the first fruits of victory. Write his faults in the sand, and his virtues in the granite. Gentlemen, silent but powerful and far-reaching is the revolution inaugurated by your act in taking the colored laborer by the hand and telling him that his interest is common with yours, and that he should have an equal chance in the race for life. These declarations of yours are ominous, and will not only be felt throughout the length and breadth of this great Republic, but will become another great problem in American politics for the kings and dynasties of Europe to solve. It is in America, and it is only Americans that can work up and work out such great revolutions in a day. God grant that it may be as lasting as the eternal hills. I speak to-day for the colored men of the whole country, and that label to the Gulf—from the Atlantic to the Pacific—from every hill-top, valley and plain throughout our vast domain, when I tell you that all they ask for themselves is a fair chance; that you shall be no worse off by giving them that chance; that you and they will dwell in peace and harmony together; that you and they may make one sturdy and strong pull until the laboring men of this country shall receive such pay for time made as will secure them a comfortable living for their families, educate their children and leave a competence to their posterity and age. Slavery, or slave labor, the main cause of the depletion of white labor, is no more. And it is the proud boast of my life that the slave himself had a large share in the work of striking off the fetters that bound him by the ankle, while the other end bound you by the neck.

What you and laboring men of this country have reason to fear from the colored laboring man. We desire to see labor elevated and made respectable; we desire to have the highest rate of wages that our labor is worth; we desire to have the hours of labor reduced, as well as the increase of the laborer's share of the profits. And you, gentlemen, may rely on the support of the colored laborers of this country in bringing about this result. If they have not strictly observed these principles in the past, it was because the doors of the workshops of the North, East and West were firmly bolted against them, and it was impossible for them to force their "way to admittance." Time forced out, time warmed off, his only hope was to put his labor in the market, to be controlled by selfish and unscrupulous speculators, who will dare do any deed to advance their own ends.

Mr. President and gentlemen, American citizenship with the black man is a complete failure, if he is proscribed from the workshops of this country—if any man cannot employ him who chooses, and if he cannot work for any man whom he will. If citizenship means anything at all, it means the freedom of labor, as broad and as universal as the freedom of the ballot. I cannot tell how far your action in admitting colored delegates on this floor is going to influence the minor organizations throughout the country. Shall they still prescribe the colored labor, or will they feel bound to follow your noble example of Monday? The question being to-day asked by the colored men of the country is only to be answered by the white men of the country. We mean in all sincerity a hearty cooperation. You cannot doubt us. Where we have had the chance, we have always demonstrated it. We carry no prejudices. We are willing to forget the wrongs of yesterday and let the dead past bury its dead. An instance of this may be found in my own native Maryland. After we had been driven from shipyard to shipyard, until at last we were kicked completely out and cast upon the cold charity of the world, we formed a cooperative union, got it incorporated, raised $40,000, bought a shipyard, gave employment to all of our men, and now pay them outside of their wages fifty per cent on their investment. And is that all? No. We give employment to a large number of the men of your race, without regard to their political creed, and to the very men who once sought to do us injury. So you see, gentlemen, we have no prejudice. We have issued a call for a National Labor Congress to meet in the City of Washington on the first Monday in December next. Delegates will be admitted without regard to color, and I hope you will be well represented in that Convention. Questions of the mightiest importance to the labor interest of the United States will be discussed. We will be very glad to have your cooperation there, as you have ours now. The resolutions of this Convention will have an important bearing on that Convention. The more you do here, the less we will have to do there.

The colored men of this nation are entirely opposed to the repudiation of the national debt. They go in for every honest dollar borrowed to be honestly paid back, and on the terms stipulated in the original agreement. Any other course is more ruinous to the poorer than the capitalist. The permanence, not of this Administration nor of any other, but of the Government itself, depends on the honest paying of its debts. A dishonest Government, like a dishonest individual, will be arrested, tried, convicted and punished.

The money borrowed was from individual pockets—the slaveholders of the South and their sympathizers in the North forced us to borrow this money. It was borrowed to put down the rebellion, not to put up slavery, for that was not in the contract. Liberty to the slave was hatched by the eggs of the rebellion. And of all men in the United States the laboring men of the North, East and West are most benefited by the money borrowed. You know that if you had not whipped slavery, slavery would have whipped you. If the rebellion had succeeded, slavery would have soon spread over the entire country, and you white laboring men of the country would have been forced to work for what a man chose to give you, and if that very often, under the lash, as was the case in South Carolina, you refused, stopped this? The money that our Government borrowed in good faith. Has the Government paid too much for its use? We think you will find it is no fault of the Government, but of those who rebelled against it. These are questions that require your weightiest consideration. The workingmen of this country are a vast power, can take care of themselves, and will not be hoodwinked by any political demagogue in or out of power. What we want is low prices for the necessaries of life, an honest administration of the Government, economy in the expenditures, and such a compensation for the time made as will afford us an independent living. We want no land monopolies, any more than money monopolies or labor monopolies. We want the same chance to make a fortune as is accorded to the rich—not to make the rich richer, and the poor man richer. We do not propose to wage a war on capital, and we do not intend to let capital wage a war on us. Capital and labor must work in harmony, and all labor reforms, to be made permanent, must be founded on the soundest principles of political economy. We feel that in the person of President GRANT the workingmen have a strong friend. After the quibbling of the Attorney-General, and others in authority, whether Congress meant you should have a day's wages for eight hours' labor, President GRANT settled, and it was declared, that eight hours was a day's labor, for which there should be no reduction of pay. He is a type of Americanism, as handed down by the fathers. He cannot be an aristocrat, he cannot feel himself above the common people, and any measure looking to the elevation of the workingmen of this country we believe is sure to have his support. The colored men of the country thoroughly indorse him.

Gentlemen, again thanking you for what you have done, and hoping you may finish the good work of uniting the laboring and working men of the country by some positive declaration of this Convention, I wish you a complete success.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

At the afternoon session the question recurred on allowing Mr. WALSH, the delegate from New-York Typographical Union No. 6, to withdraw. Mr. A. C. CAMERON having first made an ineffectual attempt to get an adjournment till 9 A. M., to-morrow, in order to give the various committees time to report.

The question on allowing Mr. WALSH to withdraw his credentials was put, when Mr. WALSH said that he thought the matter needed no vote. He was instructed to retire and should do so, if Miss ANTHONY be retained as a delegate. It was a question for the Convention to decide whether they would keep the friendship of the National Typographical Union, spread throughout the country or retain Miss ANTHONY. If she remains, we go; if we remain, she must go.

Mr. A. C. CAMERON, of Illinois, JOHN WALSH, of New-York, Mr. BLUESERT, of New-York, Mr. COOGSWELL, of Illinois, Miss ANTHONY and others took part in the discussion. Miss ANTHONY said that colored men had been admitted to seats on this floor because they had the right to vote. She asked for woman that she be invested with the same talismanic charm of the ballot, in order that she might protect herself and not be entirely dependent upon man's will and option.

Discussion was continued, and at length it was declared that Miss ANTHONY's credentials should not be received, by a vote of 68 to 25, after which the Convention adjourned till 9 P. M. to-morrow.

The following is the letter of Hon. F. P. BLAIR, referred to in the foregoing report. It was written in answer to one from JOHN MAGUIRE:

SILVER SPRING, Md., Aug. 14, 1869.

John Maguire, Esq.:

MY DEAR SIR: I have received your letter of the 6th inst., in which as a member of the Executive Committee of the National Labor Organization, you invite me to attend the Convention about to assemble in Philadelphia, or to express my views, in writing, touching the objects of the organization. Your organization is right in addressing itself at once to the financial question, and you say, with truth, that "the Congress of the United States, by transferring power to corporations which control the money of the country, have created thereby a worse monopoly than the old United States Bank," and you justly compare the fatal policy adopted by the usurers to subject our Government, after the war of 1812, to their sway, to that adopted during the late war.

Moneyed men always have a simple process with accessions, States or individuals to get possession of the land of the country. It is a lien and mortgage when the estate of an individual is to be transferred to an individual creditor. When a great body of creditors combine and grasp the credit and resources of a great nation, in addition to the lien and mortgage, they add a mortgage of all the assets of the National Treasury, by banking powers are incorporated giving them sway over the whole financial system and credit of the Government.

By this process they get not only interest on the whole amount of bonds, far greater in amount than they loaned the Government, but they get the power to tax the people by an indefinite amount of loans and paper issues, and so increase the usury ad libitum. The late Senator GUTHRIE, of Kentucky, distinguished as the ablest Secretary of the Treasury of our times, assured me that the national banks, receiving their regular dividends in specie on the Government bonds, then lending the ninety per cent in notes, returned them by the Treasury where they lie their bonds with loans on the Government, and individual deposits, and profits on bills of exchange, compounding the interest thereby nearly dividends, paid in advance, cleared at least forty per cent on the amount of their capital! And I know instances in which the capital was doubled the first year, this is the enormous taxation that is ruining the country.

The modern system of national banking on the bonds of the Treasury, paying interest, and then converted into capital, and next almost duplicated by nine-tenths of their amount being loaned to the creditors of the Government in bank notes turned over to them for bank credit, latter, with the various credits of the nation and all its deposits to back them, you may well say it is a mere speculate, and, therefore, were heavily taxed and a reduction of the rate of interest as rapidly as the public credit will enable us to borrow money at a lower rate of interest. We have already seen so rapid a reduction on the public debt, and can in our growing resources and improved credit see means for a much more rapid reduction that our ability to pay is no longer a question of doubt or alarm; and now we have only to resist the wish of capitalists to procure the debt as a permanent basis of investment, and of the people for a too rapid reduction of taxes, in order to secure the full and ample payment of every dollar of the debt within twenty years.

Allow me to say, in this connection, that I notice with regret an inclination to repeal the income tax. This is the only tax now levied by the United States on acquired property. It is the fairest tax that can be levied. The only difficulty is in ascertaining accurately the income of individuals; but this is a difficulty that will, I am sure, be overcome. I hope soon to see all our internal taxes repealed, except the taxes on whisky, tobacco and opium. These now, if fairly collected, are amply sufficient to pay every dollar of our expenditure, except the public debt, and a fixed sum, say $140,000,000 per annum, set apart from the taxes on foreign goods will, if faithfully applied, pay off the public debt. These taxes are the best taxes. They are amply sufficient, and can be so levied as not to affect domestic industry, but rather so as to promote and encourage it.

THE CURRENCY.

The condition of the currency is a much more difficult and dangerous question. It is a standing disgrace and reproach that our dollar of promise is only worth seventy cents. Four years have now passed since the war closed, and this promise to pay a dollar on demand is worth less than it was this day four years ago. Why is this? All other forms of public securities have advanced in value. We pay the bondholders their interest promptly, and even before it is due. This note is as much a contract and promise as is a bond, and the refusal to pay is such an act of repudiation as the refusal of the payment of principal and interest of the bond. There is no want of means to pay the notes. We have enough gold to pay one-fourth of them, and the application of the surplus gold alone would almost, if not entirely, restore the balance to a gold standard. The funding of a small portion of the residue, or even the right to fund them would maintain them at or near par. Why then is this not done? The only reason is that public opinion, which controls Congress, will not allow it to be done; that the contraction of the currency, or every any measure to advance the market value of the currency without a reduction of the amount will derange prices, disturb the equities between the debtor and creditor, and reduce the nominal but not the real value of all securities to the gold standard. These considerations are not to be overlooked and careful provisions ought to be made for them. But the standing dishonor of the nation by maintaining in circulation her notes promises to pay, without any provision for their payment, with gold lying idle in the Treasury to redeem them, is one of the things that, should be speedily put an end to. No party can be charged with this, for public opinion, stronger than all parties, forbade a reduction of the currency; but I trust the Republican Party will have the courage to grapple with this question and place our currency on the gold standard value by use among all civilized nations.

THE TARIFF.

There is another subject about which it seems to me there is a great deal of useless discussion, growing out of the use of mere phrases without defining their meaning. These are revenue tariff and protective tariff. A tariff is a tax on imported goods, and experience has shown that it yields most revenue when it only takes such a load distributed mode of taxation as the traffic will bear. With or without a public debt, a tariff must exist, and while the public debt remains we will probably, under any administration, continue to raise about $150,000,000 in this mode. Now this is a revenue tariff, and it is also a protective tariff to the precise extent that it is levied on goods that we can manufacture in this country. The precise distinction between a revenue tariff and a protective tariff I am unable to make out. I have shared in framing all the Tariff bills that have passed Congress for the past twelve years—I think six in number—and either or all of them could be called truly and properly a revenue tariff, or a protective tariff, as you choose—you pay your money and you take your choice of names. No horizontal tariff or uniform rate on all articles imported has been proposed by any one. The articles are either named and taxed or embraced in schedules bearing a different rate of tax. Now, if by a revenue tariff is meant uniform rate on all articles, that every man differs with foreign commerce will concede that such a tariff is impracticable. On some articles it would be unproductive and defeat the revenue, on others it would be confiscatory, too small to yield the revenue demanded by the public service. If by a protective tariff is meant a tariff that will exclude all foreign productions that can be made in this country, then such a tariff would greatly impair the revenue, and very few indeed would commit themselves to such a policy. The tariff, as it now exists, is a tariff designed to raise on our present importations about $150,000,000. The protection that it renders is purely incidental, but is greatest on such articles as are made of iron or other metals, and is not so great as to prevent a healthy competition between foreign and domestic manufacturers.

The precise rate of taxation is always a question of detail, and is the subject of opposing interests. Every man wants a high tax on the articles he produces, and a low one on the articles he imports; but this conflict of interest is rarely a party question, nor can it be settled by any general rule, but must be fixed by the nature of the article itself. The framing of these tariffs is done by the representatives of commercial, agricultural and manufacturing States, and usually result in the compromise of conflicting interests. The present tariff was framed to raise the highest revenue from the smallest importations. Articles of luxury, such as wines, cigars and silks, were selected for the highest duties. Raw articles indispensable for our own productions were selected for the lowest duties. The question of protection is purely incidental, and until our debt is so reduced that we may largely reduce our taxes it is idle to discuss the mere policy of protection as a measure of national economy. It is enough that we must now levy the duties to raise revenue, and before we necessarily centre the manufactories of this country will be on an equable footing as to defy the competition of the world. I have always believed in the policy of protection, and before the war was for confining duties to articles that came into competition with home production. But now we must extend our duties to all imported articles, even to those, perhaps, the most necessary, as the raw material for home production. Protection, ample and sufficient, is an inevitable incident of any tariff for revenue that will raise the sum that all parties expect to derive from duties on imported goods.

CONCLUSION.

The national bank system, Mr. SHERMAN said, was never a party measure, but sprung out of the vital necessity during the war of absorbing State bank paper. If hereafter the currency can be more equally distributed among the States, the system is open and free to banks wherever organized, and the notes be paid in specie, in his opinion it will be the best system ever devised in any country. In conclusion, Mr. SHERMAN referred to the gratifying progress made in the process of reconstruction, saying in this connection that he believed the election of General GRANT saved a second civil war. He paid a high tribute to the President's administration of public affairs, and appealed to his hearers to rally to the standard of the great Republican Party to which they belonged—a party which has solved many difficult problems in the past, and certainly from its composition is able to solve the less difficult problems in the future—a party which has always been true to its trust in its broadest sense and has always been true to the interests of labor and laboring men.

THE DROUGHT.

Its Effects in Philadelphia—Condition of the Fairmount Reservoir.

From the Philadelphia Inquirer, Aug. 18.

The Fairmount Works were yesterday visited by great numbers of people, among whom a feeling of apprehension and dread was apparent as to the possible result of a single day or night. At 8 o'clock yesterday morning the amount of water on hand as reported to Chief-Engineer GRAFF measured but three feet eight inches, but at 4 o'clock in the afternoon it had dwindled down to a little under two feet. It is, therefore, certain that if the intense drought should continue we will, in a short time, be without water.

The water in the Schuylkill River is at an unusually low ebb, but there is ample to supply the wants of the city, if it could only be made available. Even the 250,000,000 gallons released from the dams of the Schuylkill Navigation Company, within a few days, would furnish a supply for a great length of time, if it could possibly be utilized, as suggested by some persons, by the use of steam fire-engines. Now that the apprehending danger is on us, there appears to be a decided expression of opinion against the waste of water occurring in the mechanical operation of filling the reservoirs, as well as the too great reliance on the water power at the Fairmount Works.

The Turbine wheels use twelve gallons in forcing up one, and the breast wheels forty gallons—an expense which may appear somewhat startling to many readers. The Chief Engineer of the Department remained at Fairmount nearly all Yesterday afternoon, and he was interrogated at almost every step he took as to the probable condition of affairs, in reference to the entire supply being stopped.

We have said that a daily supply of about fifteen million gallons might be obtained by putting the engines of the Schuylkill or Spring Garden Works and Delaware Works, in Kensington, to their greatest possible capacity, and which even with this limited supply would be most gratifying and acceptable to the neighborhoods supplied by said works, it would be of no service to the great majority of our thickly-settled population, who rely on the supply from Fairmount. There was a very general feeling of indignation, yesterday, expressed against the recklessness and carelessness of the population, who, without regard to the extreme necessities of the case, still further the scarcity by dowright, willful waste.

During all of Monday night, and also yesterday up to 4 o'clock, it was hardly impossible to force any water into the reservoirs, but at that hour a medium supply was being emptied in, with the hope that it might possibly be continued to be so supplied until probably 10 or 11 o'clock at night. There is, however, no relief of a permanent kind to be obtained, excepting a copious supply of rain.

In the Corinthian-avenue basin there was reported to the Chief Engineer fifteen feet of water; Spring Garden, seven feet, and Kensington six feet. Comparing these figures with the state of affairs at Fairmount, as above given, an idea of the state of affairs in the city may be readily had.

Some anxiety is expressed lest the scarcity of water or the entire absence of the same, or fluctuations in the supply, should cause the extinction of numerous steam boilers. There are in the city about 4,000 boilers of different kinds and 700 licensed engineers, the latter numbering about one-half the engineers of the city. All that is necessary to prevent explosion is for those having charge of boilers to use ordinary precaution, and never let the water get below the lower gauge.

Colored Labor Convention in Georgia.

The following call for a convention of colored laboring men of Georgia appears in the Augusta Republican:

"In view of the prospect of a large influx of foreign emigration to the State of Georgia, and the corresponding advance in the value of real estate of every kind and character, consequent upon an increase of population, coupled with the necessity of a thorough organized system of labor, notice is hereby given that a convention of colored laboring men will be held in the City of Macon, on the 19th day of October next; and each and every county in the State is requested to send delegates. Let us meet together, exchange ideas and devise such measures as will be most conducive to the happiness and interest of our own race, and to the development of the many resources and advancement of the true and lasting interest of the State of Georgia.

The French Crop in Central New-York.

From the Rochester Union, Aug. 17.

From conversations with farmers and those who make fruit-growing a specialty, we are satisfied that the peach crop this season will be the largest for many years in this vicinity. Our exchanges from adjoining counties all speak of the large crop of peaches. Farmers are quite anxious to contract their crops, but dealers are not desirous of contracting even at the low rate of 25 per cent. Those who have large orchards say that inspectors are high and cause that they cannot afford to pick and bring to market their fruit at such low prices—but we have no fears of a short supply on those grounds. The crop is so abundant in other parts of the country that an active shipping demand is not anticipated by dealers.

EXTENSIVE FORGERY.

An Adroit Operator Foiled—How a Bank's Caution Saved its Money.

A letter was received on Monday last by BROWN BROTHERS & Co., bankers, No. 59 Wall-street, postmarked Baltimore, and signed H. M. HORTON, Post Office Box No. 345, in that city, inclosing a draft for $9,850, purporting to be drawn by the Third National Bank of Chicago on the National Park Bank, New-York, in favor of H. C. PHELPS, who had indorsed it to HORTON, and the latter to BROWN BROTHERS & Co. This firm, not being in the habit of making remittances until after the acceptance of drafts or checks, sent the draft to the Park Bank, the officers of which telegraphed to Chicago, and thus learned that the Chicago bank had no draft out on the New-York bank except one for $95. The Horton draft was then protested for non-acceptance, and HORTON was so advised by letter directed to his address at Baltimore. In the meantime Superintendent KENNEDY had been informed of these facts, and he at once telegraphed to Marshal FARLOW, Chief of Police of Baltimore, suggesting that a watch be put upon Box No. 345, and if the person receiving therefrom a New-York letter addressed to H. M. HORTON was not a responsible and known party, to arrest him for forgery.

Tuesday morning a detective on guard at the Baltimore Post Office noticed a woman apply at Box No. 345 and receive the letter. Followed by the detective, she walked to the Philadelphia Railroad depot on President-street. Her further movements are not known, for the reason that the detective suddenly became seized with the idea that it would be a good thing to go to the office and report progress to his chief, and accordingly did so. Of course he was hurried at once back to his post of observation only to find that the woman had not waited for his return and was nowhere to be seen, nor has anything since been learned concerning her. Inquiries made at the Post Office showed that a few days ago a woman, who was not known to any of the officials, rented the Box No. 345 until October, in the name of H. M. HORTON, but no particular attention had been paid to the matter and nothing satisfactory could be deduced from this bare fact. The Police are now busily engaged in considering whether the woman is herself the forger, or whether she is merely a "cover" for the real criminal. Whatever may be the fact, there is no present prospect that the detectives will succeed in making any arrest in the case.

ODD FELLOWS.

Annual Session of the Grand Lodge of the State of New-York—Excursion to Sing Sing.

The R. W. Grand Lodge of the State of New-York reassembled at 9 o'clock A. M., NICHOLAS L. FRITZ, M. W. Grand Master, in the chair. After resolving to hold the next annual session at Rochester, the Grand Lodge took a recess until 2 o'clock this A. M.

The officers and members then took the cars, which brought them to the foot of West Thirty-fourth-street, where a band awaited their arrival, who escorted them to the steamer Sunnyside, lying at the pier. The steamer, and a barge attached thereto, which were gaily decorated with flags and streamers, soon cast off and steered up the river toward Sing Sing, where they arrived after a pleasant sail of four hours, which were spent by the excursionists in singing, dancing and other pastimes. There being over twenty-five hundred people on board the boats, it was deemed inexpedient to admit them all to the prison grounds and the Committee was, though very reluctantly, compelled to change the programme in this respect. Left to themselves, the excursionists improved the occasion to visit the surrounding country, while a few gained admission to the prison grounds and examined that institution.

One of the party, the popular P. G. Representative DE WITT C. LANGDEN, met with an accident, which, though not serious, somewhat marred the pleasure of the occasion. In ascending a steep hill back of the village Brother LANGDEN left his carriage, and walking along side of it, slipped, and fell in front of the wheel, which bruised his leg. His wounds were dressed, and, on the return to New-York, he was taken to his home. The excursion, which, thanks to the efforts of Brothers VANDERVOORT, PATNSON, BRETHFIELD, and other members of the Committee, was a success, terminated at 9 o'clock P. M.

The Grand Encampment reassembled in the evening at Steinway Hall, JAMES ASTLEN, M. W. Grand Patriarch, in the chair, assisted by W. ENGLAND, M. E. Grand High Priest; E. WHITNEY, M. W. Grand Senior Warden; C. V. CLARKE, M. W. Grand Secretary; GEO. SMITH, R. W. Grand Treasurer, and THOMAS PRUDEN, R. W. Grand Senior Warden.

A number of P. C. Pts. were in attendance for the purpose of receiving the G. E. degree, which was conferred upon them by the M. E. Grand High Priest.

Several reports of Committees were received and acted upon, among them a report favoring the granting of charters to several subordinate encampments, which report was concurred in.

The Cost of the Newark and New-York Railroad.

The President and Treasurer of the Newark and New-York Railroad Company filed in the office of Secretary of State, at Trenton, on 19th of August, a sworn statement of the cost of said road, including equipments and appendages, from which it appears that the total cost was $1,919,779 65, and upon this sum they will be required to pay to the State, on the first Monday in January next, one-half of one per cent., by supplement approved Feb. 21, 1869.

The Two-Hundred Pounders—Gathering at Fat Mess.

The proclamation issued by the President of the Two-Hundred Pounders, who will assemble at a clam-bake at Gregory's Point, Norwalk, Conn., on Friday next, the 20th, is below. The invitation, it will be perceived, is general for all who possess the weighty qualification named:

"Be it known unto all men, that, for weighty reasons, (200 pounds, more or less, each,) there will be held the second annual Clam-Bake of the Fat Men of the world, who can turn the scale of 200 pounds, or put in an appearance that will warrant their ability to eat sufficient clams to make out that weight. The meeting will be held for the purpose of eating clams, having foot and sack races, and velocipede riding. There will be scales on the ground to establish the weight of those who attend, and a photographer to sketch their outlines. Any man who falls in weight or looks will be allowed one year to make up the deficiency. In accordance with the above, you are hereby ordered to appear at Gregory's Point, Norwalk, Conn., Friday, the 20th day of August, 1869, at 9 o'clock A. M."

Perils of Railway Travel in Connecticut.

From the New-Haven Journal, Aug. 18.

Mr. MOSES H. WILSON, of Bridgeport, on the Sunday night train out of New-York, was struck over the eye by a stone, which came through a window of the car in which he was sitting, just as the train was entering the tunnel, and knocked him over into the lap of a gentleman by whom he was seated. He has been confined to his bed most of the time since by a severe pain in the head. A gentleman on the morning train from Stamford to this city was also hit by a stone thrown through the window a few mornings since, which caused the blood to flow so freely that he was obliged to stop over at Bridgeport for the 8:30 train, to staunch the wound and wash the blood off [illegible]

EUROPE.

CONTINENTAL SUMMARY.

The French Empire—Eugenie's Visit to the East—The Chinese Mission—The Carlist Movement—Musical Gossip—The Theatres.

From Our Own Correspondent.

PARIS, Friday, Aug. 6, 1869.

Before this reaches you the reforms conceded by the Senatus Consultum will have been embodied in the constitution and France will have passed from a personal to a Parliamentary form of government. The Committee appointed to report on the project was named yesterday and it is probable that their task will not be completed before the 12th or the 14th. The discussions on the measure will take at most only from four to five days, and by the 31st, it may safely be assumed that the whole of the articles will be voted. It has been rumored that some fifteen or sixteen amendments would be proposed by the advanced Liberals of the Chambers, but on being questioned on the subject they all disclaim having any desire to impede the prompt passage of the concessions extended from the Government. They will be content for the moment with what they can get, satisfied that it is but an installment of the more ample measures that must follow in its wake. As for the obstructions, they will offer no opposition. Like the Conservatives in the English House of Lords, they have discovered that resistance may be carried to a suicidal point, and that submission is the better part of valor.

As a matter of course, the concessions that are about to be introduced in the Constitution will be followed by a general amnesty. It would not be logical to allow men to pine in prison for offences which, under the new state of things, will cease to have a character of political delinquency. Of the details of this measure it is perhaps premature to speak, but I believe that I am safe in stating that not only will all existing condemnations for Press offences be suppressed, but that all prosecutions for delits of the same kind will be abandoned. The measure, however, will not extend to the plot against the security of the State, with which the strikes in the coal and mining districts are said to be connected. The amnesty will be promulgated on the 15th of August, on the occasion of the Imperial fête.

It is is said that there is to be an entire change in the personnels of the prefectures throughout the country, a measure certainly demanded by the arbitrary conduct of the functionaries at their head during the recent elections. In connection with these changes, the report is again revived that M. HAUSSMANN will be removed from the position in which he has accomplished so much that is admirable and so much that is the reverse. It is contemplated, I believe, to confide to the ministry of public works, under its new organization, the direction of all the enterprises in connection with the city of Paris, which have augmented its burdens whilst they have beautified and embellished it.

THE EMPRESS' VISIT TO THE EAST.

The Constitutionnel denies the political character ascribed to the voyage of the Empress to Constantinople and Egypt. It says that in visiting Egypt Her Majesty has no other motive than that of honoring by her presence the opening of the Suez Canal—a work due to French genius and perseverance. Her object in visiting Constantinople is merely to manifest her sense of the courteous invitation extended to her by the Sultan.

This is not the only movement on the part of royal personages which is just now giving rise to conjectures. The visit of VICTOR EMANUEL to Paris, for which preparations are being made at the Imperial residences, is an event to which political importance seems to be attached. The peculiarly sensitive character of the relations existing between the Cabinets of Berlin and Vienna would go to confirm the impression that danger is apprehended in that quarter, and that a necessity is felt for drawing as close as possible the ties between France and Italy. The readiest way of doing this, however, would be the removal of the French troops from Rome. Until the Emperor repudiates M. ROUHER'S famous jamais, there can never be a sincere and cordial alliance between the two countries. The Russian journals speak of a projected visit of the Viceroy of Egypt and the Princes of Servia and Roumania all three vassals of the Sultan, to the Emperor of Russia, and an inference would seem to be drawn from it unfavorable to the continuance of amicable relations between the Cabinets of St. Petersburg and Constantinople. Supposing the report to be true, which I am far from admitting is the case, I do not see what political object the Khedive has to gain by associating himself with the Princess in question. He is to all intents and purposes just as independent of the Porte as if he were not nominally its vassal. The great Powers will suffer no disturbance of the statu quo in the East, and they have recently declared to ALI PASHA, through their representatives at Constantinople, their firm resolution to maintain intact the relations existing between the Porte and Egypt. As regards the motives of the Khedive's visits to the European Courts, full satisfaction has been given to the Sultan on that head, and therefore if, as is stated, he is now about to go to St. Petersburg, we may conclude that his journey there has no more political significance than that attaching to the movements which had previously excited the susceptibilities of the Porte.

THE CHINESE MISSION.

Some of the journals here have been circulating reports to the effect that dissensions had broken out in the Chinese Legation, and that Mr. BURLINGAME'S associates in the mission were acting independently of and trying to get rid of their American colleague. The story originated in the fact of the Chinese members of the Legation having accepted an invitation to dinner at a house where Mr. BURLINGAME was unable to go. The circumstance was seized upon by that class of interests which has shown itself consistently hostile to Mr. BURLINGAME, to base upon it a tissue of rumors analogous to those which are being constantly sent over the wires from China and which have not a particle of foundation. The great work in which our countryman and his Chinese colleagues are engaged naturally excites the jealousy and opposition of a clique whose wealth has been gained by maintaining by a system of lying and misrepresentation the old barriers of prejudice between that vast Empire and Europe.

In a long conversation which I had with Mr. BURLINGAME yesterday, he assured me that not only were the specific facts alleged untrue, but that from the departure of the mission from Pekin down to the present time there had never been the slightest difference or misunderstanding between himself and his Chinese colleagues. They reposed the fullest confidence in him and he in them, and they were distressed to find that there should have been found any one malicious enough to endeavor to convey a different impression to the world. I asked Mr. BURLINGAME if the efforts that were being made at Pekin to weaken his influence with the Chinese Government had been at all successful. He laughed at the idea, and told me that he did not care how much of that thing was tried, as it only confirmed the Government in the conviction of the wisdom of the policy it had adopted. The men at the head of affairs in China were as shrewd and practical in their views as any statesmen in the world, and they fully appreciated the motives and objects of the party who were endeavoring to damage the usefulness of the mission. In the dispatches which he received from Prince KUNG he never encountered a word of implied censure or disapprobation as to the course he was pursuing. On the contrary, all his acts received a generous and cordial support, which was in the highest degree gratifying to a diplomatist occupying so difficult and exceptional a position. As some of the malicious reports to which I have referred may have reached you through other channels, I know that you will be glad to receive this full and emphatic contradiction of them from the lips of the Minister himself.

While on the subject of the mission I must not omit to notice the compliment paid to it by the celebrated preacher, Rev. PERE HYACINTHE, in one of his recent discourses:

"Mais pourquoi parlé je seulement de l'Europe," he said, "quand j'entends dire que du bord de l'Asie, a travers les pans écroulés de la grande muraille la vieille chine envoie vers nous un fils de la jeune Amérique, et reclame par son organe l'honneur d'être introduite dans le concert des nations civilisées. C'est cette diplomatie qui a vraiment le secret de l'avenir."

The period of the departure of the mission for Berlin is not as yet fixed. It will not leave in all probability before the end of the month.

THE CARLIST MOVEMENT.

Although the official organs of Madrid persist in treating the Carlist outbreak as divested of any serious cause for anxiety, it is not the less certain that bands of insurgents are everywhere in movement, and that the Government troops are actively employed in their pursuit. It is, therefore, ridiculous to pretend that the movement has been put down, and that there is nothing further to be apprehended from the pretensions of DON CARLOS. The Correspondence Particulare d'Espagne, a recently-established organ of the pretender, affirms that not only has he not abandoned his plans of campaign, but that the movement is daily increasing in importance, and that the bands of the department of La Mancha are assuming the proportions of a formidable army and giving plenty of occupation to the Government troops. The affair which took place at La Guardia the other day shows that the insurgents are daily assuming more confidence, and are even occasionally obtaining advantages over their pursuers. The place in question is situated on the defiles leading to the most inaccessible parts of the mountains of Navarre, and commands the road leading from Vittoria to Logrono. It contains a population of about 2,500 souls, and both from the traditional attachment of its inhabitants to the Carlist cause and its strategic importance, it became an object to the insurgents to obtain possession of it.

On the 28th, two Carlist bands marched into the place and made preparations to strengthen it. They were attacked next day by a flying column of Government troops with a half battery of mountain howitzers. The combat was a desperate one, and lasted the whole day. Toward night the Government troops, finding themselves short of ammunition and provisions, and dreading an attack from other bands, withdrew, and the Carlists remained masters of the place. They only remained a day there, however, as it is not their object just yet to engage in regular military operations, or to make a permanent stand anywhere. They hope by a partisan war to worry the country into accepting the prince of their choice in default of the appearance of any other, but this time they forget that if they have no rival prince they have a new and powerful party to oppose them, and that if the Unionists and Progressists have no other alternative left them they will choose the Republic.

The whereabouts of the Duc DE MADRID still continues a mystery, though it is reported that he recently held a council of war at a short distance from the capital. My belief is that he is still at this side of the frontier waiting until the movement assumes an importance which will justify his hazarding himself at the head of it.

MUSICAL GOSSIP.

Mlle. MARIE MEHRON, who was so much applauded at the concours of the Conservatoire, but to whom, contrary to expectation, no prize was awarded, has been engaged by Signor CALZABIGI, director of the opera at New-Orleans. Another of the fair competitors at the concours vents to the members of the jury to say that they must give her a prize, as her father had died the previous week. M. RAVINA sent back word to her that the grounds which she had put forward for the obtainment of the distinction were conclusive against their awarding it to her, for if they were to give it to her they would have all the pupils of the institution poisoning the authors of their being.

The "Armide" of GLUCK will positively be produced at the Opera this Winter. M. GEVAERT is hunting up all the old partitions so as to give it in as complete a form as possible. The mise en scene will be splendid.

THE THEATRES.

A new comedy by JULES MONNEAUX has just been received at the Varietes. The Gymnase is about to reproduce "Diane de Lys," one of the best pieces of ALEXANDRE DUMAS, Jr., but which has not been played for a long time. M. CADOL'S new comedy, "Le Fruse Monnaie," will be brought out shortly at the Theatre de Cluny.

The rehearsals of the new fairy spectacle, "La Chatte Blanche," commence on Sunday next at the Gaite, and the piece will be produced on the 18th or 14th of the present month. Immense expense has been gone to in the preparation of the piece. There are to be three ballets, the splendor of which is said to be unrivalled. Mlle. LAMOUREUX will make her debut on the 3d. Report speaks highly both of her talent and personal attractions. The famous THERESA has four songs in the piece. There are twelve tableaux, each of which has cost a fabulous sum. I understand the piece has already been secured for one of the New-York theatres—I suppose Niblo's.

AFFAIRS IN SPAIN.

Reception of General Sickles by the Regent—The Carlist Outbreak—Death of Donna Carmen, the Nun Conspirator—Extraordinary Casualty and Loss of Life in a Public Bath—Destruction of Newspaper Offices and Savage Assaults Upon Editors, &c., &c.

[From Our Own Correspondent.]

MADRID, Monday, Aug. 2, 1869.

The principal event of interest which has occurred here since my last has been the presentation of the new American Minister, General SICKLES, to the Regent. This took place on Thursday last in the Palace of San Ildefonso at La Granja, where the Regent and his family are spending the temperate or hot season.

The ceremonies began by the presentation of our Ex-Minister, Hon. JOHN P. HALE, who has held the office of Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the United States to Spain for four years. After presenting his letter of recall Mr. HALE took his leave of the Regent in the following terms:

YOUR HIGHNESS: On terminating my mission in Spain I can do no less than manifest to your Highness my sincere gratitude for the continued proofs of kindness and courtesy which I have received from the Government of the Spanish Nation, more especially since your Highness was elected to the high post of Chief of the Executive Power. To me it is pleasing to recollect that, during the four years which I have represented the United States of America, nothing has occurred to alter the traditional amity and good understanding which have always existed between both nations. I indulge the hope that these relations will be daily strengthened and increased, and that Spain, under the regenerating influence of her new political institutions, will attain in the future days of glory which will obscure the fame of her glorious past.

The Regent replied as follows:

"Sir, your mission being terminated by the letters you have just shown me, it affords me gratification to assure you that on returning to your country you will be accompanied by the sympathies of the Spanish people and of their Government, who will always preserve a grateful record of the zealous representative who has so worthily fulfilled the honorable charge confided to his care. I give you thanks in the name of Spain for the wishes you express in favor of her prosperity and of her glory, and at the same time I address my fervent prayers to the Most High for the welfare of the great people who are offering such unmistakable proofs of their amity to the Spanish nation."

Major-General SICKLES was then presented, with the usual formalities, by the "Introducer of Ambassadors." After delivering his letter of appointment from President GRANT, he addressed the Regent as follows:

"I have the honor to be the bearer of a letter directed to your Highness by the President of the United States, who has accredited me in the capacity of Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to the Spanish Government. I consider myself happy in having been selected to discharge such a mission of amity and good understanding. I should be wanting to the instructions of my Government, no less than to my own desires, if I failed to do my utmost to preserve and strengthen the bonds of perfect cordiality which have so happily and for so long time existed between both nations.

"The people of the United States have not been a spectator of the great events which have resulted in the election of your Highness to the supreme Magistracy of this noble country. Attributing in great part her prosperity as a nation to the beneficial influence of liberal institutions and to the good faith with which she has kept every international compact, the United States have to-day, more than ever, a great appreciation of the traditional amity they owe to Spain, arising from their both being animated by that new sympathy which is born of a common participation in the beneficial exercise of constitutional liberties."

The Regent replied:

"I received with satisfaction the letter of the President of the United States, in which he accredits you in the capacity of Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to the Spanish Government. You may rest persuaded that in it you will find the most cordial and efficacious cooperation for the realization of your noble intentions, and that our efforts will not be spared to insure the still further strengthening of the traditional relations of amity and good understanding which so happily exist between the two Governments, as befits two nations who, being already bound together by an ancient bonds, to-day find another, equally powerful, in the beneficial exercise of the ample liberties placed by our Constitution in harmony with the Monarchy and glorious records of Spain. With respect to yourself, Sir, whose distinguished personal qualities are known to me, I have the pleasure to assure you that the President of the United States could have made no selection more grateful to me than that of yourself for the honorable post he has confided to you."

Major-General SICKLES then presented to the Regent the personnel of his Legation, namely, Colonel JOHN HAY, Secretary of Legation; Major RAPHAEL, his Aide-de-Camp; Lieutenant-Colonel JOHNSTON, L. DE PEYSTER, United States Artillery, attaché; Mr. W. E. CONOVER, of New-York, attaché; and Mr. A. AUGUSTUS ADEE, of New-York, attaché.

The presentations being concluded, the members of the Legation withdrew, much gratified with the cordiality of the reception given to them by the Regent, who, in ceremonials of this kind, appears to great advantage, as he combines the qualities of dignity and good nature to a greater degree than any public man in Spain.

La Granja (the Grange) is a pleasant Summer retreat of the former Spanish monarchs. An hour's ride by rail and six hours fatiguing ride by dilligence brings you to this delightful abode, which is situated nearly 4,000 feet above the level of the sea. Its temperature is cool and invigorating, when at this time of the year Madrid is literally a furnace. The royal palace of La Granja was built by PHILIP V. to rival Versailles. The fountains, twenty-six in number, are among the finest in the world, and when they all play, as they did for General SICKLES and his party, they offer an imposing spectacle. One of them rises to a height of 75 feet, and another to that of 130. The gardens are the finest in Spain. SERRANO and his family inhabit the modern part of the Palace. The Regent is very simple in his tastes. He delights to go about not only at La Granja, but also at Madrid without escort of any kind, and generally holding his little children by the hand. He refused to travel in the saloon carriage of the Ex-Queen, which was prepared for him when he went down to La Granja, and insisted on going like any ordinary first-class passenger. He refused even to have a special train and went in the regular one. Not so Mme. SERRANO. She shares the pardonable weakness of her sex for display, and would, if she were permitted, require regal honors to be paid to her and her husband wherever they go. When SERRANO took her to the depot to see her off, (the Carlist rising prevented him accompanying her for a few days,) they found that the Railway Company had redecorated the room which was formerly set apart for royal receptions, and which is now brilliant in fresh ornamentation and gilt furniture. Mme. SERRANO was just entering it with the children, when her husband pulled her gently back, saying "not here my dear, but there," at the same time leading her to the ordinary reception or waiting-room for first-class passengers, into which they entered and remained until the train was ready to start. Major-General SICKLES and his party are at present at the Hotel Russia, where the business of the American Legation will be transacted until they have found a house which will suit them. The General is accompanied by his mother and his daughter, Miss LAURA SICKLES. Hon. JOHN P. HALE and his family take their departure to-morrow. They go at once to Paris, where they are likely to remain some months.

THE CARLIST OUTBREAK.

Since my last the Carlists of La Mancha, under SOBARINGOS, closely pursued by the troops, have fled, some toward the Portuguese frontier and others to the mountains of Toledo, dividing themselves into small bands. Isolated encounters between some of these bands and their pursuers have taken place, always resulting in the triumph of the latter, and in the capture of prisoners of importance. Some fresh bands have presented themselves in other districts to the great terror of the inhabitants, and the great satisfaction of the troops and volunteers, who desire to stamp out the audacious disturbers of the public peace. Beyond now and then robbing a mail coach, stopping a train to search for arms, and stealing a mule or a horse, and occasionally carrying off a Civil Guard or a Custom-house officer, they have done no real mischief. In the Province of Leon, however, within the last few days a fresh band, or rather two fresh ones, amounting in all to 500 men, made their appearance, one being commanded by a former Carlist leader, and the other by a Canon of Toledo named MILLA. The Government are rather anxious about them, but they are closely pursued by the troops. The brave young Lieutenant of Hussars, Señor VERNEZ, who led the cavalry in the petty action of the 25th, with the Carlists under SOBARINGOS, and whose cry as he rushed to the charge was "Viva España, without traitors," has died of the wounds he received.

THE NAVAL REVIEW.

Admiral TOPETE has been holding a great naval review of the Spanish fleet at Barcelona, and is expected to return to Madrid to-morrow.

EXTRAORDINARY CASUALTY AND LOSS OF LIFE.

A frightful and unprecedented accident occurred at Valencia on Friday evening. The floating baths at a time when they were full of bathers, suddenly careened, filled and sank. Great confusion prevailed. The boats from the shipping saved some thirty persons, but the consternation was very great, it not being known how many were in the baths at the time. Up to the last accounts ten or twelve bodies had been found, but the authorities at Valencia have a list of twenty-four persons who are said to be still missing.

DEATH OF DONNA CARMEN.

The ex-nun DONNA CARMEN, in whose house in the Calle del Lemus so many evidences of a Carlist conspiracy in the capital were discovered last week as to lead to her arrest and that of some priests, died a night or two ago in the prison. She was ill when she entered it. With her death, some persons implicated no doubt breathe freely, as it is true of dead women as well as of dead men that "they tell no tales." Fresh Carlist plots are being discovered here daily, as well as in the Provinces.

SAVAGE ASSAULTS UPON EDITORS.

Two most curious and cowardly attacks have been made on the Press last week here. A party of eight or ten armed men proceeded to the office of the Jeremias, a satirical paper, destroyed the presses, broke up the type, and severely assaulted the editors. It is unknown who they were or what their object was. The next day twenty armed men did the same thing at the office of the Siglo, an Isabellin paper. In the latter case the editors were very severely handled. Since these attacks both papers have suspended their publication. Investigations are on foot, and it is hoped the aggressors will be brought to justice, but lawlessness is very much the rule here at present. The whole of the journals are very loud in their denunciation of these dastardly proceedings.

International Land and Labor Agency—Letter from Elihu Burritt.

BIRMINGHAM, Aug. 2, 1869.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

I beg to commend to your favorable notice an enterprise which I have succeeded in setting on foot, and which is partially developed in the enclosed circular. I hope and even believe that the spirit, principles and objects of the scheme will meet your approbation. Should this be the case, you might considerably benefit your readers, or many of them, by introducing the Agency to their notice. I believe that there are hundreds of families reached by your journal that would be glad to avail themselves of the facilities it offers them for obtaining tidy, modest, well-bred English house servants, and perhaps governesses for young children.

Yours, very respectfully,

ELIHU BURRITT.

CIRCULAR.

BIRMINGHAM, England.

The object of this Agency is to facilitate the settlement in the United States of English farmers, mechanics and laborers of all occupations, with a single eye to their own good and the equal good of both countries. The enterprise, therefore, in every root, branch, leaf and fibre of its working, will be pervaded by the spirit of good will and intent to all parties concerned in its operations, as these will clearly indicate.

There are thousands of farmers' sons trained to the best systems of English agriculture, but who cannot find farms in England on which to apply their skilled industry, though preferring the occupation to which they were born and bred. These will constitute a class of purchasers who will do much to improve American agriculture in the New-England States, as well as in the West and South. Then there are thousands of merchants, manufacturers and well-to-do tradesmen, who cannot divide their businesses with their sons, nor set them up in their own line of occupation. These will form another class of purchasers in America, if put in the right way to that end. And nothing, perhaps, would more encourage and induce them to do so than some plan which would enable them to make purchases without incurring the risk of being victimized or deceived by land speculators. This Agency, therefore, is opened up expressly to facilitate such purchases, by buying direct from the owner at the small charge of one per cent., to be paid by each party. By advertising in American papers, and by special agents, lists of farms for sale on the proposed terms, will be obtained in most of the different States. Thus, when an intending purchaser has fixed upon the State he would prefer, a choice of farms in it will be presented to him, and immediate correspondence set on foot with the owner. Should the property not be found truthfully and honestly described on examination, half the 1 per cent. advanced to the Agency by the intending English purchaser will be returned to him, and the sale will fall to the ground. Therefore, honesty will be the best policy as well as best principle on the part of the American proprietor. As only 1 per cent. will be required of him by the Agency, he can well afford to send to it a full, true and honest description of his property offered for sale, with his best terms, in a printed advertisement or manuscript letter, directed to the Secretary.

The second undertaking of the Agency is to supply orders for English laborers of all occupations, including skilled mechanics of every trade, farm laborers, gardeners, grooms, shepherds, &c., &c.; also governesses, female clerks, housemaids, dairymaids and domestic servants of all kinds. As some of these female servants will be unable to pay all the passage money before sailing for America, the party ordering a servant of this class should remit £20 to the Agency, not only to defray part of the expense of the voyage, but as a guarantee to her of a bona fide contract. She will be met at New-York or Boston by a trusty agent, and directed to the destination given, where what has been advanced by her employer will be deducted from her first wages. In all cases the servants thus forwarded to America will carry with them trustworthy and satisfactory references, and the parties in America engaging them should forward some reference to the Agency with their orders, that confidence may be mutual, for some moral responsibility will be involved on both sides.

Among other objects comprehended by the Agency will be the introduction into use in England of American agricultural implements, and of all kinds of improved tools and labor-saving machinery; also our small, cheap cooking-stoves for the working classes, and other conveniences for them which are practically unknown in this country. On the other hand, commissions will be executed for Americans desiring any English improvements of a similar character, including best specimens of farm, garden and flower seeds, and cuttings from fruit trees for grafting, so that English horticulturists may introduce into their orchards the Baldwin, Seek-no-further, Greening and Northern Spy in exchange for their Blenheim Orange, Ribston Pippin, &c. In a word, all transactions designed to benefit the two countries, by promoting a cheap and easy interchange of their skilled industries, labor and productions, natural, mechanical and mental, will be undertaken by the agency, including the transmission of small sums of money between immigrants in America and their relatives in Europe; the forwarding of 1 s. s and periodicals by post or otherwise; obtaining patents or copyrights for useful inventions or literary productions, &c., &c. It will also endeavor to promote an interchange of the song-birds of the two countries, so that our bobolink, robin and blackbird may sing their best songs in England, and the English robin, lark, thrush and linnet sing theirs in America; so that the same "street musicians of the heavenly city" may be common to both nations, to give morning and evening songs to the spontaneous symphonies of the perpetual peace and brotherhood existing between the two great families of the English-speaking race.

For further particulars, address J. M. HOLMES, Secretary of International Land and Labor Agency, Birmingham, England.

SUSQUEHANNA RAILROAD WAR.

Further Return of the Sheriff—Argument to Take Place on Tuesday Next on Motion to Set Aside Judge Peckham's Orders—Appointment of a New Receiver.

The Sheriff of Albany County yesterday made a very elaborate amended return in obedience to the order of Judge BARNARD. The return sets forth at length the orders and counter-orders made in the case, together with the proceedings before Judge JACOB H. CLUTE, on the return to the writ of habeas corpus, all of which has been already published. There is still in the Sheriff's hand an alias non-bailable attachment against the defendants, return to which is to be made on Tuesday, the 24th inst. On the same day, at a Special Term to be held in Albany, argument will be had on orders to show cause issued by Judge BARNARD, why the order made by Judge PECKHAM, appointing ROBERT H. PRUYN receiver, should not be set aside, and why JAMES FISK, Jr., and CHARLES COUNTER should not be made defendants in the action; also, why the injunction issued by the same Judge should not be vacated and set aside.

It is reported on good authority that in the original suit brought in this City before Judge BARNARD, and in which an injunction was granted restraining the holders of the three thousand shares of alleged unlawful stock from disposing or incumbering the same, Judge BARNARD has appointed WILLIAM J. A. FULLER receiver, with authority to take possession of the stock, and directing the defendants to deliver the same to him on demand.

The Albany and Susquehanna Railroad—A Card from Director Everts.

To the Editor of the Binghamton Republican:

As there have been many erroneous stories circulated recently concerning my position as one of the directors of the Albany and Susquehanna Railroad, you will confer a favor upon me by devoting a portion of your valuable space to the following statement of facts in the case, and a brief resume of my course as director during the past year:

I was not elected director in the interest of either party, but my name was placed on both tickets. This gave me a somewhat independent position in the new Board. After the election I found that, to a certain extent, I had a controlling voice in the action of the Board. If I worked with the party opposed to Mr. RAMSEY, he could not be elected President; if I acted with the Ramsey party the Board would be a tie.

Believing at that time that Mr. RAMSEY wished to promote the best interests of the road, and the people along the line, and sharing largely in the great respect and gratitude which was felt toward him, by all interested in the road, on account of the energy, industry and perseverance with which he had worked for the road for so many years, I determined to do all in my power to secure his reflection as President. This could only be accomplished by a compromise. By agreeing to let the anti-Ramsey faction have a majority of the committees and the Vice-President, I secured his reflection as President.

From that time to the present it has ever been my determination to watch the interests of the road with great care, that I might be the better informed as to the most judicious course to pursue, and to insure to the other party only so far as it would benefit the road and the people of this city, which I considered should be the object and aim of every true friend of the enterprise.

I have always been in favor of the Albany and Susquehanna keeping and maintaining its position as an independent corporation, which might have been done had the towns along the line retained their stock; a measure which I strongly advocated until a majority of them had disposed of it, at which time I plainly saw that the road must pass into the control of either the Central or the Erie. Finding it necessary to take sides in the question, I chose what I thought would be for the best interests of Binghamton, and exerted my influence accordingly.

There are some who, having allowed their prejudices to run away with their better judgments, have been unmercurous enough to privately intimate that I sold out. I do not propose to eulogize myself, but am willing to allow my reputation for integrity and honest dealing to be examined side by side with that of any of those who have so far lost self-respect as to be guilty of circulating such malicious slanders.

Respectfully yours, A. EVERTS.

Hearing in the Receivership Question at Albany.

ALBANY, Wednesday, Aug. 18.—The examination relative to the Receivership of the Susquehanna Railroad before the referee, (Surrogate LAWTON,) was continued to-day, Mr. COUNTER being the only witness testifying. He testified that he was appointed a Receiver on Friday, Aug. 6, in New-York, at the Erie Railway office. On reaching this city, at 8 o'clock the next morning, he learned at the Susquehanna Railroad office that Mr. PRUYN had been appointed. At the close of his examination the names of JAY GOULD, JAMES FISK, Jr., and L. D. BUCKER, were called as witnesses, but neither answered. It was finally stipulated between counsel that the parties should appear on the 20th inst., to which time a further hearing was adjourned.

OUR NEW QUARANTINE.

Description of the New Landing Stations and Hospitals—Affairs at Quarantine Landing.

The horrors of Quarantine are rapidly becoming mere legends; and Coney Island no longer trembles, nor does Staten Island take up arms at the prospect of a descent by the Quarantine officers on their sandy shores. For several years past the work of making an island in the lower bay of New-York Harbor as a site for Quarantine buildings has been in progress, and the structures have since been erected. It is not probable, however, that they will be used this season except in case of emergency. The buildings are all finished, but the landing dock is incomplete, and until this important portion of the work is out of the contractor's hands it will be difficult for vessels to land their passengers at the station.

PLAN AND CONSTRUCTION OF THE STATION.

The station is built on what is known as the West Bank, a small sandy island, a mile and a half from the main land. The bank was formerly nearly covered by water at high tide, and it was found necessary to increase its area and also the height of its shores above the water, before it could be rendered available for Quarantine purposes. The work was confided to Mr. J. W. RITCH, the well-known architect. He caused to be constructed strong cribs of twelve-inch timber, interlaced with cross beams, each crib being eighty feet in length by thirty in breadth, and about twenty feet at the top. These were towed to their position on the shores of the bank, filled with stones and sand and then sunk. The cribs were sheathed with stout plank, and against this was thrown up a "rip-rap" wall of stones of large size. The area of the island or bank was thus increased to 400 feet in length by 220 in breadth. The sides are parallel, but each end converges to an acute angle. The first crib was sunk in January, 1867. The work has been greatly delayed by the failure of the Legislature to make the necessary appropriations.

THE BUILDINGS.

At the southeast end of the island is the Doctor's or Superintendent's house, a modest mansion, two stories in height, forty feet square, and containing eight or ten rooms. It, like all the other buildings on the island, is constructed of wood, on a stone foundation, and is painted white with green blinds. Running out from the rear of this house is a covered hall or passage way ten feet in width, on each side of which are four wings, eighty-nine feet in length by twenty-four feet in width. These wings form the hospital. The first two are used as quarters for the servants, nurses and officers of the hospital; and here also the kitchen is located. The other six, which are but one story in height, are supplied with beds for 200 patients, though it is believed that twice that number can be accommodated on an emergency. At the north end of the island are a wash and disinfecting house, 181 feet by 24; a baggage and dead house, 45 by 40, and an officers' laundry, 26 by 12. They are all one story in height.

By the arrangements of the hospital buildings it will be seen that ample provision has been made for lighting and ventilation. A breeze is always blowing through and between the buildings, and thus all offensive effluvia is carried off. In the area between the wings of the hospital twenty-two brick cisterns for the reception and storage of rain water have been constructed. It is believed that they will afford an ample and unfailing supply, but in addition to these an artesian well will be sunk, so that no danger of running short of a most necessary element need be apprehended.

One mile distant from the West Bank is another small island, sometimes known as Red Bank. It resembles West Bank, but is somewhat larger. This also has been surrounded by crib work, and its area is now 625 feet by 310. In shape it resembles the First Station. On the west side a slip has been constructed 160 feet in length by 50 in breadth. The crib work is nearly completed, but the "rip-rap" wall has not to be built. It has not yet been decided what special use will be made of this station, but it is probable that here will be constructed large brick stores for the reception of cargoes discharged from infected vessels. At present the station is a sandy waste. It is intended to plant both islands with trees, so that some shade may be obtained during the heat of Summer.

AFFAIRS AT QUARANTINE.

At present there is very little doing at Quarantine, and the boarding officers and others are having an easy time of it. Complaint is made by Dr. SWINBURNE that robberies to a large amount take place of goods discharged at Quarantine from vessels coming from infected ports. The robbers are young men and boys, who prowl around in small boats, and probably by collusion with the mates of the vessels, manage to run off a large quantity of property. He has made application to have policemen stationed at Quarantine to watch these depredators; but so far his application has been disregarded.

THE WEIGHMASTERS' FRAUDS.

The Examination of General Egan Resumed—Testimony for the Defence.

The examination into the frauds alleged against THOMAS W. EGAN in the preparation of pay-rolls, while acting as United States Weigher, was resumed before Commissioner OSBORN yesterday. Several witnesses were produced for the defence. Assistant District-Attorney JACKSON appeared for the Government.

James H. McGee testified: I was employed in July last as tallying clerk in Egan's district; was appointed by Mr. Webb; I received my discharge from Mr. Wilkes last week; commenced there about the 1st of July and worked steady until I was discharged; received my pay regularly; I signed the roll (roll of July 25 shown witness) and received the money opposite my name—$19 60; I performed the work; received $20 20 opposite my name on the roll of July 22; the signature is not mine; I don't know whose hand the signature is in; I received the $20 at that stands opposite my name on the roll of July 22; I did the work, signed the roll of July 8, and received the money, $17 40; I did the work; don't know whether the signature is mine or not; I worked that week but can't say whether so much as that or not; received some of the money, but can't say whether I received the full amount or not; kept no memorandum of work; it was my first week in the district; never worked in it before; when employed there I had nothing to do with Gen. Egan; he hadn't anything to do with my employment or discharge.

Isaac B. Dickinson testified: I worked in Egan's district in July; Captain Webb employed me and paid me; Mr. Wilkes generally set me to work and kept my time; I signed the rolls; know Jenkins, and saw him writing in the office; saw Costello about the office, but not at work; don't know Nairo, Mentz nor Hovey; have signed the pay-rolls in blank.

Colonel Michael W. Burke testified: I am a weigher in the Custom-house; was a weigher during the month of June; I took charge of Egan's district for about twenty-seven or twenty-eight days in the month of June; I put in three rolls while in charge of Egan's district; I understand that there was some trouble about Egan's confirmation; Frank Webb gave me the pay-rolls to sign.

The counsel for the defendant subsequently offered to prove that McGee, the first witness, never worked nor drew any pay in the month of June, after which the case was adjourned until next Tuesday.

Society of Practical Engineering.

The New-York Society of Practical Engineering met yesterday afternoon at Room No. 14, No. 25 Liberty-street, for the election of officers and transaction of business relative to the coming session. The election resulted as follows: President, JAMES A. WHITNEY; Vice-President, JOSEPH B. LYMAN; Recording Secretary, WM. B. HARRISON; Corresponding Secretary, LAWRENCE HOLMES; Treasurer, C. WILLIAMS.

A vote of thanks to the Trustees of the Cooper Institute was passed unanimously, they having offered the Society the use, without charge, of a room for the meetings. The offer was accepted, and the meetings will be held monthly in one of the rooms of the Institute building. A resolution was also adopted inviting both graduates and students of the Cooper Union to participate in the meetings; also one providing that the graduates be privileged for admission to membership without the payment of an admission fee. A resolution was also carried by acclamation, extending an invitation to the President of Columbia College and the Faculty and students of the School of Mines to be present and assist in the discussions, &c., of the stated meetings.

It was decided to hold the opening meeting of the next session on Wednesday evening, Sept. 15. The regular subject will be, "The Uses and Construction of Water Meters." A carefully-prepared paper giving much information new to the public will be read, and a report of a committee appointed some months ago to investigate and compare the most noted water meters will be rendered. Any inventor or manufacturer of water meters will be allowed, after the reading of the above, to exhibit and explain his improvement, provided that he have either a working model or full-sized apparatus to illustrate his remarks. It is hoped that a full exhibition of the novelties in this important class of mechanism will be had. The meetings will, as hitherto, be free to the public. It should be mentioned that among the other resolutions adopted was one reducing the fee on the admission of members from $10 to $5, and the annual dues from $10 to $3.

The Browne Mystery—Arrest of the Husband on a Charge of Poisoning His Wife.

Detective MAHONY, of the Fourth Ward, and Deputy-Sheriff HALSEY, of the Coroners' Office, proceeded to the residence of Mr. R. BRAINARD SMITH, at Clifton, Staten Island, yesterday morning, armed with a warrant issued by Coroner FLYNN for the arrest of GEORGE BROWNE, the colored man who is suspected of having caused the death of his wife, Mrs. SARAH A. BROWNE, at No. 73 Sullivan-street, by means of poison. It will be remembered that a package of sugar found in the house lately occupied by the deceased woman was given by the Coroner to the Board of Health for the purpose of analyzing it. The chemist to the Board having made proper examination and tests, reported to the Coroner on Tuesday that he had found a sufficient percentage of arsenic in the sugar to have caused death when an ordinary quantity had been consumed. This discovery led to the subsequent action of the Coroner. The officers entrusted with the execution of the warrant succeeded in arresting BROWNE, who was a domestic in the employ of Mr. SMITH. On their arrival in the City the prisoner was committed to the Tombs to await future action. Steps will be immediately taken to secure the exhumation of the body of Mrs. BROWNE, when a searching investigation of the remains will be conducted by Professor CHANDLER and Dr. SMITH, the result of which will greatly determine the proceedings of Coroner FLYNN. As it stands, there seems to be good reason for supposing that a murder has been committed.

German-American School Association.

The following are the introductory paragraphs to the Constitution of the newly-formed German-American School Association of this City:

SECTION 1. The system of free public schools, as established by law in the State of New-York, is the only one that fully conforms with democratic republican institutions, and is capable of being brought to highest perfection. As it aims at the best possible education of every individual, it is an indispensable condition of its successful operation and one of the most important duties of every citizen, that all should assure for it an active and spontaneous interest. In this spirit and with such conviction the German-American citizens of the City of New-York associate and organize themselves under the name of a German-American School Association of the City and County of New-York.

SEC. 2. It is the purpose of this Association:

1. To arouse and keep alive an active interest of its members in all that concerns the public schools, to enlighten the public on methods and principles of education and to support all movements for reform when deemed useful or necessary.

2. To use its influence for the election and appointment of such persons who are most worthy and best fitted to fill offices in the department of public education.

3. While acknowledging that English is the national language and considering that it cannot be denied that the German is, of all foreign tongues, the most important in this country—to urge its introduction as an obligatory study into the public schools, in order to afford all pupils an opportunity to acquire at least one foreign language, and to induce German-American parents to send their children, hereafter, more generally to the public instead of private schools.

The Association is formed by delegates from German school clubs in the different wards of the City. At a meeting held at the Cooper Institute, Room No. 24, on Tuesday evening, when seventy-nine delegates from the ward clubs were present, the following officers of the Association were elected: Messrs. WILLIAM WALLACH, President; FR. V. BUSSING and M. ELLINGER, Vice-Presidents; Dr. LANDSBERG and E. STRUSS, Secretaries; MAX ARENSBERG, Treasurer.

A petition to the Board of Education, prepared by a committee, was read, and will be decided upon in the next meeting of the Association, which contains, with regard to person of foul play is entertained. This idea is strengthened by the fact that the face of deceased was very much swollen and black, traces of external violence having also been discovered. Coroner FLYNN proposes to hold an investigation to-day at his office.

Arrest of a Passenger for Europe on a Charge of Larceny.

JOSEPH F. PRITCHARD, aged 23, a native of England, and recently residing at No. 176 Tillery-street, Brooklyn, was arrested yesterday on board the steamer Colorado, at Pier No. 43 North River, as she was about departing for Europe. The charge against PRITCHARD was that of larceny. It appears that when he closed up his business, anticipating a return to England, PRITCHARD left his trunk at the residence of JOHN SAWYER, at the corner of Jay-street and Fulton-avenue, Brooklyn. Soon after his departure from the house yesterday, with his effects, Mr. SAWYER missed a gold watch and chain valued at $120, and $10 in money, which had been left in one of the dressing-rooms. As PRITCHARD was the only person who could have had access to the room, Mr. SAWYER followed him to the steamer's dock, where he informed Detectives WILKINSON and SCOTT of the facts. These officers arrested the accused, when he confessed his guilt and gave information where the watch and chain could be found, in a Brooklyn pawn office. PRITCHARD was locked up in the Second Ward Station-house for examination before a Magistrate to-day.

UNITED STATES COMMISSIONERS' OFFICE.

Before Commissioner Shields.

ACTION AGAINST TOBACCO DEALERS.

Isaac Harvey, Assistant Assessor, complained that Moses and Samuel Strauss, tobacco dealers at No. 74 Williams-street, had violated the seventy-sixth section of the Revenue law of 1868, in not having kept a book for the daily record of their sales and purchases. The warrant for their arrest was executed by Deputy Marshal Smith. Their examination was fixed for next Monday at the request of Mr. A. P. Purdy, Assistant District-Attorney.

SMUGGLING TOBACCO.

Charles C. Buddington, of the Fifth Precinct Police, caught a sailor named Samuel Goodman in the act of smuggling two small boxes of smoking tobacco into this port, together with several pounds contained in a valise. He brought the tobacco from Norfolk, Va., on board of the ship Saratoga. He was held for examination in the sum of $1,000. Assistant District-Attorney Purdy arranged the examination for Saturday next.

ALLEGED FRAUDULENT REVENUE RETURNS.

Michael J. Connolly made a deposition, in which he charged the firm of Archer Brothers, grocers and liquor dealers at No. 171 West-street, with having made certain false and incorrect revenue returns during the months of October, November and December, 1868. The complainant claimed that he was employed by the defendants as book-keeper at the time, and that he was directed by Charles J. Archer to make out the alleged fraudulent returns. Deputy Collector Bullock was present with Connolly. After the charge had been made, Charles J. Archer produced an affidavit, in which Connolly was accused of having entered into a conspiracy with a distiller named Hanlon in July last, for the purpose of obtaining $2,000 from the firm of Archer Brothers by blackmail. It is said that the firm have been known in Southern circles for the last thirty years. The accused furnished bail in the sum of $1,000 each, and their examination was subsequently fixed for next Wednesday. Assistant District-Attorney Purdy will prosecute the case.

POLICE COURTS.

The Tombs—Kelly, Justice.

A BOLD LARCENY.

Yesterday afternoon one JOSEPH WARNER entered the store of J. W. HOFFMAN, at No. 274 West-street, when he gained stealthy access to the desk, on which was at the time lying a pocket-book containing $190 65. As soon as he felony got possession of his plunder he made a sudden rush for the door, in a wild attempt to escape. He was pursued, however, by the proprietor and his employes, who succeeded in arresting the fugitive. On being arraigned before the Magistrate the prisoner was fully committed without bail, notwithstanding the appearance of Alderman ROBINSON, who offered security for his appearance for trial.

A DISHONEST DOMESTIC.

Mrs. Laura C. Bonneville, of No. 71 Sixth-street, Hoboken, proceeded to the Castle Garden Labor Bureau, in the early part of last June, where she engaged the services of a German woman named Mary Fisher, as a domestic. The girl only remained one day in her situation, and at the same time she disappeared Mrs. Bonneville missed some worth of wearing apparel. Officer Murray, of the Twenty-sixth Precinct, on duty at Castle Garden, took the matter in hand and arrested Mary yesterday. When taken into custody the girl confessed her guilt, and stated that she had pawned a portion of the property, which was recovered. The Magistrate held her for trial.

Jefferson Market—Ledwith, Justice.

HIGHWAY ROBBERY.

Lawrence M. Coy, aged 16 years, was produced in Court by Officer McConnell, of the Twentieth Precinct, and Thomas Whittaker, of No. 354 West Twenty-fifth-street, made a complaint, stating that at a late hour of the previous evening he was passing through West Twenty-seventh-street, when he was suddenly attacked by four men, two of whom held him while the others robbed his person of $12 in money and a watch and chain worth $150. The freebooters immediately fled, and three of them escaped, but Coy being arrested and the complainant positive he was one of the assaulting party, he was committed without bail for trial at the General Sessions.

THE CASE OF STEINBERGER & SONS.

The suit brought last week by W. Steinberger, of No. 423 Broadway, against M. J. Steinberger & Sons, of No. 411 Broadway, and Julius Metzler, charging them with having a quantity of silk goods in their possession, the result of a burglary on his premises, in June last, was concluded yesterday. The prisoners proved conclusively that the goods came honorably in their possession in the regular course of trade, and they were honorably discharged, the goods being returned to the possession of Messrs. M. J. Steinberger & Sons.

Essex Market—Shandley, Justice.

Thomas Dunn, for beating Mary Ann Kelly, committed. August Frank, for not paying rent, committed. Ann Gardner, for fighting with Isabella Stuckey, locked up.

The Last Winter's Modifications of the Revised Statutes.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

The publication of the laws enacted at the last session of the Legislature has been so long delayed, that your professional readers may be interested to be informed what changes are made in the more important provisions of our Revised Statutes by these enactments.

The following is an analysis of these amendments:

Revised Statutes, vol. 1, p. 688, sec. 1.—This provision as to ownership of wrecked property is extended to property cast by any inland lake or river upon the land.—Laws of 1869, chapter 358.

Vol. 2, p. 65, sec. 6.—The provision that a child born after the making of his father's will, and unprovided for, should have his share of the inheritance, is extended by chapter 22 of the laws of 1869 to the case of wills of either parent, and by making the reference expressly to the last will.

Vol. 2, p. 99.—Sales under this title of real estate, the heir of the devisee's title to which has been divested, are forbidden, unless letters shall have been applied for within four years after the death of the decedent, and application for sale made within three years after letters granted.—Laws of 1869, ch. 345.

Vol. —, p. 102, sec. 5.—The omission to serve a copy of an order to show cause on minor heirs or devisees, does not affect the sale, if the order was duly served on the guardian.—Laws of 1869, ch. 260.

Vol. 2, p. 480, secs. 18, 19—as to the duties of Commissioners admeasuring dower—is amended by ch. 423 of the laws of 1869 so as to enable them to decline to lay off the third part, if, in their judgment, it is impracticable or not for the best interest of all concerned; and in such case to require them to report all the facts to the Court, and the Court may order the annual value of one-third the land to be paid to the widow. The absolute right to elect as to any premises is not affected.

Vol. 2, p. 548.—This title, which gives proceedings by the owners of low lands to have them drained through the lands of other persons, is superseded by a new statute—Laws of 1869, ch. 362.

Vol. 2, p. 681, sec. 1.—The definition of arson in the fourth degree here given is amended by ch. 372 of the laws of 1869, so as to include the setting fire to buildings in the process of erection and to lumber piled or yarded for sale.

The laws of 1869 will compose two large volumes, and are expected to appear in September or October. AUSTIN ABBOTT.

The Baldwin Will Case.

LAW OFFICES HENRY A. ROOT,
No. 320 BROADWAY, NEW-YORK,
Wednesday, Aug. 18, 1869.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

I do not approve of trying any case in the public prints, but when a lawyer's professional honor and private character are so grossly attacked as mine have been by the reply prepared by counsel for the petitioner to set aside the will of the late John H. Baldwin, it is but due to a reputation hitherto unsullied to enter at least a protest which shall allay the current of misrepresentation which that reply is intended to create. The case will be tried next month, and then I shall court and demand a scrutiny into the whole transaction. I have only to say that I acted under the advice of Hon. William Fullerton and of Messrs. Morrison, Lauterbach and Spingarn, who approved of and advised every step in the settlement, and each said to me when the matter had closed that we had done the best thing. As for the charge of collusion and forgery, they will be shown to be utterly false, and the petitioner a month hence would as soon aver them against her present counsel as she now does against me. HENRY A. ROOT.

We advised and counselled Mr. Root in all the proceedings had by him in relation to the settlement of the claims of the petitioner against the estate of the late John H. Baldwin, and know that his course was strictly honorable and professional.

MORRISON, LAUTERBACH & SPINGARN,
Aug. 18, 1869. Counsellors at Law.

WEDNESDAY, Aug. 18—P. M.

The singular fact was announced at the Treasury Office at noon to-day that only $1,136,200 of United States 5-20s were offered to the Sinking Fund on any terms, being $863,800 less than the amount of two millions advertised for this day's purchase. The Assistant Treasurer accepted all that were offered, (except $10,000 out of form,) and has been compelled to advertise that he will receive offers to supply the remainder of the two millions at noon to-morrow, (Thursday,) when he will also open bids to take from the Treasury $1,500,000 Gold Coin. Meanwhile the market for the Public Funds has suddenly advanced 1@1½ ₱ cent, on the discovery that the public are indisposed to sell to the Sinking Fund or to the great dealers in Wall-street at the recent decline in prices. And while the Sinking Fund has been singularly fortunate in securing from some of the Street Brokers who felt bearish in the Public Funds, or who had secured a few cheap parcels yesterday and the day before, $1,136,200 at low figures, the probability is that for the $3,963,800 yet to be purchased in August the prices will be advanced to nearly the highest prices yet paid for this object—although in the meantime the extreme decline of 3¼@4 ₱ cent. has occurred in the Open market.

The lesson to be drawn and hereafter improved upon, from the unexpected result to-day, is that the great body of the holders of United States 5-20s throughout the country are reluctant to surrender their Bonds even to the Government itself for the Sinking Fund, except at figures steadily and closely approaching their par value in Gold, and that whenever any party in Wall-street undertakes to bear them by way of compensating losses by the decline in Gold, or for any other cause or on any other calculation, they must inevitably fail in drawing Bonds from the public at large. The following are the offers made to and accepted by the Sinking Fund to-day:

ACCEPTED OFFERS TO SELL U. S. 5-20s.

The price of Gold continues to fluctuate around 135 ₱ cent. The highest sales to-day were at 135¾ and the lowest (in the morning) at 132½ ₱ cent. The Customs demand to-day amounted to $506,000, and the transfers to the Treasury Office here for Gold, to be delivered on telegraphic orders by the Office at San Francisco, amount to nearly a million of dollars. As far as we are advised, Mr. Treasurer SPINNER, at Washington, has promptly accommodated all applicants for these transfers, allowing ¼ of one ₱ cent. exchange, or about one-half the cost of transportation which he would have to incur by ordering the Gold to New-York at the risk of the Government. The immediate effect of the Customs and California demands is to steady the price of Gold in the Gold Room.

The supply and rates of Money to the Brokers, on call loan, continue fairly easy, though lenders continue indisposed to enter upon time engagements, as the prevailing belief is that the employment of Currency through the Fall months will be active and upon a lighter reserve in New-York at the beginning of the season.

The Foreign Exchanges are again quoted dull, and ¼ ₱ cent. lower than yesterday on actual sales; London 60 days, 109¼@109½; short sight, 109¾@110 ₱ cent.

On the Stock Exchange the recovery in the Public Funds is equal to 1 ₱ cent. all round. The Southern State Bonds are generally dull, without much variation from yesterday. The New-York and Western Railways present no marked variation from yesterday, and the speculation, as the rule of the day, may be called very dull. There was some stir in Toledo and Wabash on undefined rumors of an arrangement with the Consolidated Lake Shore Company for a lease of the Road. So far as these rumors are mixed up with the "Erie ring" and its manipulations, the public is likely to be moreadune—at least for the present.

After the late Board the following quotations were made, as compared with Tuesday night. The Public Funds and Gold were stronger that at 3 o'clock:

Of the Lumber trade of Albany, the Argus says:

"The trade has been active through the week. Shipments have been large, and a much better feeling in the market. Buyers are beginning to lay in their Winter stock. We notice a better trade at Chicago and prices have advanced $1.

The receipts at Chicago for the week ending Aug. 14 were 26,261,000 feet, against 26,010,000 feet for the corresponding week last year. The Toronto Leader, of Aug. 17, in publishing the report on the condition of the Royal Canadian Bank, made by Mr. YARKER, remarks:

"The Directors admit the loss of $300,000 in all since the bank commenced business. Mr. YARKER puts this amount some $148,000 more. He admits that there are contra amounts to be set off against this, but unwilling to say aught which might not hereafter be realized, he prefers to write off the entire sum. The result is that, according to his estimate, the bank is left with a capital of $1,000,000, equal to 79 cents in the dollar of the paid-up capital of the bank, or more than the whole paid-up capital of the Bank of Toronto, which has a standing second to none in Ontario, but rather the opposite. We dare say the Cashier would be unwilling to admit that the capital has been impaired to even this extent, but, even if Mr. YARKER's estimate be admitted, the bank, with $600,000 of cash in hand, is in a good position to resume business at once.

And we believe this is the intention of the President and Directors. Satisfied that they are in a position to recommence operations, they propose doing so at an early date—probably within the next ten days. We have no doubt that the public will view this announcement with a good deal of satisfaction and pleasure, and that they will extend to the new President, his board of directors and the Cashier, such a measure of honest support as will make the bank a great success. It has within it all the elements for such a future.

The Columbia (S. C.) Phœnix, of Aug. 15, says:

"The State Treasury states that the interest on the public debt is nearly all paid, and that the receipts at the treasury are largely in excess of the payments. The interest now unpaid cannot, we are informed, be called for until the principle and interest unpaid previous to July 1, 1867, is funded under the act of 1868. Where the provisions of that act are complied with, holders may present their claims, which will be promptly paid. Some $600,000 of State stock have been converted in bonds under the act to provide for the conversion of State securities."

The Washington correspondent of the Philadelphia Ledger telegraphs the following relative to the sources of the public revenues and the amounts collected, during the past fiscal year:

The Susquehanna Railroad War—Letter from President Ramsey.

ALBANY, Saturday, Aug. 14, 1869.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

In your paper of to-day is a communication from Binghamton, in relation to the origin of the present difficulties. Although incorrect in almost every particular, I desire the privilege of correcting only some of the more important misstatements.

1. It is not true that the Delaware and Hudson, the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western, or any other coal company, have in any way been the cause of this raid upon the Albany and Susquehanna Railroad. The coal companies have been and are now satisfied to have the Albany and Susquehanna Road independent, extending equal facilities and rates of transportation to all, which has been and is now the policy of the present management, the rates being as low as the Erie, and, it is believed, as favorable as any road in the country for carrying coal. The charge of collusion and combination between the present management of the Road and the coal companies, are without the shadow of foundation. The half million of bonds sold the Delaware and Hudson Company were taken and paid for in cash more than two years ago.

2. There has been no attempt on my part, or Mr. PENLEY, the Secretary and Treasurer, to prevent the transfer of stock, nor is there any truth in the statement that I issued 3,000 shares of new stock with reference to the coming election.

The issue of stock, and which has been the pretext for this raid, was in pursuance of a contract made more than a year ago, and with the unanimous approval of the Board of Directors, as follows: There had been about six thousand shares of stock subscribed, upon which one or more installments of ten per cent. paid, and subsequently forfeited for non-payment of the balance. It was suggested that other stock might be issued in its place, and a portion used in the negotiation of the second bonds of the Company, and with what had been received and would be in the sale, would make it nearly or quite full paid stock. Accordingly the first issue of this stock was made to

The troubles of the present Spanish Government are increasing. The Bishop of Jaen denies its jurisdiction, and appeals to the Holy See; and some of the Bishops refuse to warn their clergy against insurrection, as directed by the decree of the Regent. "In consequence of the urgency of affairs," the Cortes has been summoned to meet on the 15th of September.

THE WEST INDIES.

Mail advices from Cuba, received by the Cuban representatives in Washington, are to the 9th inst. It is reported that the effect of the Spanish conscription had been the increase of the Cuban forces. The slaves were becoming dissatisfied and insubordinate, and were about ready to join the revolutionary army and fight for their liberty. By the arrival of the steamship Eagle, from Havana Aug. 14, we are in receipt of our special correspondence, for the prompt delivery of which, together with late local papers, we are under obligations to the purser of the steamer, WILLIAM D. HEMPSTEAD. Our correspondent sends interesting and important news.

Late news from Hayti is received by the arrival at this port of the steamship City of Port au Prince from Port au Prince 7th inst. SALNAVE had taken Jacmel without resistance. He had completely surrounded Aux Cayes, and its surrender was daily expected. The City of Port au Prince was driven away from Gonaives by the steamers Quaker City and Florida, both flying the Haytien rebel flag, and she was not even allowed to stop and take the American Consul on board. The schooner Mary Jane, bound from St. Domingo to Boston, was brought to this port in tow, her Captain and two of her crew having died of yellow fever, and the remainder being unable by sickness to help themselves.

Lady Byron and Mrs. Stowe.

We cannot but deplore the publication of a narrative such as that which Mrs. STOWE has thought proper to lay before the world. It sets no question at rest, and consequently it will not even satisfy the morbid curiosity of those persons who are more interested in the scandals of Lord BYRON'S life than in his works. Mrs. STOWE has been made the means of circulating a revolting aspersion on Lord BYRON'S half-sister—sister Mrs. STOWE calls her—of whom all that is known is that she was faithful to him in the darkest hours of his life, and followed him with her sympathy in his exile. It is no justification of the course which Mrs. STOWE has unfortunately been advised to adopt, that Lady BYRON originated the calumny on an innocent lady. Lady BYRON pursued the poet with a systematic malignity which was sometimes scarcely compatible with the theory of her sanity. There was no offence of which she did not accuse him. It was only after he and his half-sister had both been buried for years that she ventured to link their names together in infamy. Then it was done in a conversation with a comparative stranger, and no proofs whatever were given in support of the odious charge. Mrs. STOWE was not called upon to revive this miserable story of domestic unhappiness. She can produce no evidence in substantiation of the narrative. All the facts and all the probabilities contradict it. Respect for the memory of Lady BYRON would certainly have suggested the propriety of allowing a mystery which can never be cleared up to sink into oblivion. She has now stepped forward with unsupported allegations of a character so abominable as to compel us to receive them with incredulity, and it is but little extenuation of her fault that she suffered herself to be imposed upon by a woman of implacable disposition and relentless temper.

It is quite evident that Mrs. STOWE approached her task in the spirit of a novelist. Her account of Lord BYRON'S affection for Miss CRAWORTH is of the gushing and sentimental order which certain writers of fiction habitually affect. Her moralizing, her frequent digressions on the subject of angels, her reflections, which are meant to be pious and narrowly escape being profane, her ecstatic account of Lady BYRON'S struggles with "fiends of darkness" for the redemption of her "husband's soul," may also be tolerated on the ground that they are part of the common stock in trade of an imaginative writer. When Mrs. STOWE comes to deal with facts we get upon ground where we at once discover her singular incautiousness in dealing with a subject of extreme delicacy. Every detail of her story is contradicted by the circumstances attending the separation of Lord and Lady BYRON. She is wrong in her quotations, wrong in her dates, wrong in the account which she gives of the mode in which Lady BYRON quitted her husband's roof. She speaks of Lady BYRON as having lived two years with her husband. The truth is that they were married on the 2d of January, 1815, and on the 15th of the following January they were separated. She states that Lord BYRON wrote a note to his wife, ordering her to leave him. "He could not and would not," says Mrs. STOWE, "have her about him, and when her child was only five weeks old he carried this threat of expulsion into effect." This is quite contrary to the actual facts. The child was born on the 10th of December. Lady BYRON went to her father's house at Kirkby Mallory in the ensuing month, for the benefit of her health. She wrote a letter from thence to her husband which has always been deemed a strong presumptive proof that Lord BYRON was guilty of no gross offence toward her. LEIGH HUNT, Captain MEDWIN and TOM MOORE read this letter. A writer in a recent number of Blackwood's Magazine recalls their testimony with regard to it. LEIGH HUNT says that it "was written in a spirit of good humor, and even fondness, which, though containing nothing but what a wife ought to write, and is the better for writing, was, I thought, almost too good to show." MOORE describes it as "full of playfulness and affection." Captain MEDWIN states that it began, "Dear Duck." A few days afterward Lord BYRON received another letter from his wife's mother, inviting him to Kirkby Mallory. The very next letter he received was one from her father, informing him that Lady BYRON had left him forever. Let it be remembered that Lady BYRON parted from her husband on good terms, that she wrote to him in a very affectionate manner, and that without seeing him again she suddenly cast him off. These are facts which have never been disputed. Now listen to the romance which Lady BYRON appears to have foisted on Mrs. STOWE:

"On the day of her departure she passed by the door of his room, and stopped to caress his favorite spaniel, which was lying there; and she confessed to a friend the weakness of feeling a willingness even to be something as humble as that poor little creature, might she only be allowed to remain and watch over him. She went into his room, where he and the partner of his sins were sitting together, and said, 'BYRON, I come to say good-bye,' offering at the same time her hand. Lord BYRON put his hands behind him, retreated to the mantel-piece, and, looking around on the two that stood there with a sarcastic smile, said, 'When shall we three meet again?' Lady BYRON answered, 'In Heaven, I trust;' and these were her last words to him on earth."

We have no hesitation in asserting that whenever and wherever this story was invented, it is entirely without foundation, and we believe that it now makes its appearance for the first time. If, however, it has been published before, it must be one of those tales which Lord MACAULAY refers to as "loathsome slanders" on Lord BYRON'S character, and MACAULAY'S comment upon them is singularly appropriate to this particular specimen: "It is not every day that the savage envy of aspiring dunces is gratified by the agonies of such a spirit and the degradation of such a name."

But the baseness of the present slander upon the memory of the great poet cannot be conveyed except in the words which we must assume were put into Mrs. STOWE'S mouth. We decline to do more than condemn the statements for which she has made herself responsible:

"From the height at which he might have been happy, as the husband of a noble woman, he fell into the depths of a secret adulterous intrigue with a blood relation, so near in consanguinity that discovery must have been utter ruin and expulsion from civilized society. * * * The person whose relations with BYRON had been so disastrous, also, in the latter years of her life, felt Lady BYRON'S loving and ennobling influences, and in her last sickness and dying hours looked to her for consolation and help. There was an unfortunate child of sin, born with the curse upon her, over whom Lady BYRON watched with a mother's tenderness. She was the one who could have patience when the patience of every one else failed; and, though her task was a difficult one, from the strange, abnormal propensities to evil in the object of her cares, yet Lady BYRON never faltered and never gave over until death took the responsibility from her hands."

Mrs. STOWE declares that Lady BYRON told her this story. If Mrs. STOWE'S memory has not deceived her, the only explanation of it can be that Lady BYRON'S jealousy and anger had overturned her reason. Lord BYRON never saw his sister after he left England. But we cannot discuss the monstrous calumny piece by piece. We submit that before we can be expected to receive such a statement it must be supported by proof. Why is it that Lady BYRON never brought this charge against her husband until an American lady happened to visit her? Mrs. STOWE says it was because she was careful for Lord BYRON'S reputation. In reality she sought by every means, and all through her life, to injure it. Once she declared that he was out of his mind, and tried to get him shut up in a madhouse. She obstinately refused to explain to him why she had left him. She sent her mother to a lawyer (Dr. LUSHINGTON) with a statement of her grievances, and he advised her to return to her husband. Afterward she told him something under the seal of secrecy which led him to reverse his opinion. Lord BYRON, as is well known, wrote a sketch of his life, which MOORE destroyed, thereby incurring a heavy responsibility. But Lord RUSSELL bears this testimony—that there was nothing in the journal of particular importance, and "no interesting details of his life." To the last moment of his existence he solemnly declared that he was ignorant of the cause of Lady BYRON'S conduct, he repeatedly challenged investigation and inquiry, and it was only years after his death that Lady BYRON ventured to heap fresh insults upon his memory. We have no inclination to undertake the vindication of Lord BYRON'S general moral character. Probably Mrs. STOWE'S estimate of that would not materially differ from our own. But we may believe him to have been guilty of many faults without crediting the disgusting story now made public. And we are quite sure that so unprofitable a topic as his misdeeds ought now to be removed from the field of public discussion. It is to be regretted that Mrs. STOWE has again invited attention to it. We must repeat that we are sorry for the part she has taken in the affair. It has rendered no service to literature, it reflects no credit on Lady BYRON, and it will not enhance the debt which the present generation owes to Mrs. STOWE'S useful and amusing pen.

We publish elsewhere a letter from Mr. ELIHU BURRITT, recommending to us a proposal for the establishment of an international land and labor agency. It is designed to promote the sale of farms to English agriculturists, the purchasers depositing one per cent. In the event of the farm being improperly described, half the one per cent. is to be returned to the intending customer. We do not see the justice of mulcting him in this half per cent. The office is likewise designed to be a means of communication between employers and servants, to encourage the sale of tools and labor-saving machinery, the exchange of farm and garden produce, and similar purposes. The scheme as described possesses many attractive features, but there are various practical details, concerning which the public will naturally desire to have some further information. It does not appear that Mr. BURRITT intends to give to the agency in question his personal superintendence, and people who wish to buy or sell land will ask who the Secretary, Mr. HOLMES is, and what tangible security they offer against breach of contracts. The guarantee given to female servants strikes us as being particularly weak. The deposit of twenty dollars would be no proof of the good faith of any man anxious to "import" an English servant. The agent on this side would scarcely be expected to inquire into the moral character of applicants. It is much to be feared that a servants' agency of this description would degenerate into a kind of traffic not contemplated by the projectors. Probably these difficulties have been foreseen, but the provisions against them are not explained in the circular now forwarded to us. The plan is well meant, and there is much room for it; but it will be necessary, first of all, to inspire public confidence in it. The questions we have suggested will otherwise stand in the way of its success.

The Fall Trade.

The low rates of freight which have prevailed for more than a fortnight on goods forwarded over our principal railroad lines to the West, have had the effect to give some activity to the trade of the City. Goods for Chicago which, before the advance, were charged at $1 88 per hundred pounds for first class, $1 50 for second and $1 27 for third, paid only 25 cents per hundred, while the fourth class heretofore 22 cents fell to 18 cents. A nearly equivalent reduction was made in the rates to other places. This change has brought to the City many buyers. On a report that after Saturday, the 14th inst., the list prices would be restored, there was unusual anxiety to have goods shipped within the week, and it was midnight on Saturday before all the trucks waiting could be unloaded. At one time the number waiting to discharge was three deep for nearly a quarter of a mile.

The alleged reason for the reduction was the supposed violation, by some of the parties, of the agreement previously made by the great lines engaged in Western transportation for a fixed rate applicable to all, except by way of the Hudson, the canal and the lakes, which, being slow and "all water," was 45 cents per hundred, against $1 88 by the railroad lines, for first-class goods. The parties to the combination were the New-York Central, the Erie, the Pennsylvania Central and the Baltimore and Ohio Roads. Goods reached the Pennsylvania Central via Camden and Amboy Railroad, and reached the Baltimore and Ohio by the Delaware and Raritan Canal, unless previously prepaid over the Camden and Amboy.

The difficulty between the lines, it is supposed, will be adjusted so that the old tariff of freights may take effect some day this week.

Some dealers are holding back in the expectation that a decline in goods more than equivalent to the advantage in freight will occur, but so far as dry goods are concerned, cotton still continues firm at Liverpool as well as our ports, and does not permit a reduction in the price of manufactured cotton without greater loss than the manufacturers are now suffering.

The quotations yesterday were Middlings, Florida, 34c.; Mobile, 34½c.; New-Orleans 34½c.; and Texas 34½c., and it was difficult to find a good article at these quotations. Owing to the condition of the market, which for some time has presented the anomaly of a higher relative price for raw cotton than for cloth, making it impossible to manufacture cottons with advantage, the Lowell, cotton mills are endeavoring to close their establishments for three weeks, in order that stocks may be diminished, and consequently advance to a remunerating rate. Their weekly production has amounted to 2,304,000 yards, which is the most important contribution made by any of our manufacturing cities to this industry. The spindles of Lowell devoted to wool and cotton number 457,512, while the combined number in Georgia, North Carolina, Virginia, Tennessee, Alabama, South Carolina, Mississippi, Texas, Kentucky and Arkansas, devoted to cotton, is only 232,023.

All the cotton mills of Lowell, except one mill, had agreed to this suspension, and it was thought to be waiting for the action of the latter before taking effect, but even if it fail, a diminution in staple cotton goods ought not now to be expected, considering their relative price to that of cotton, and the fact that stocks in the hands of distributors are low throughout the country. The new crop as it is late this season, will not come forward earlier than the middle of October, too late to have effect upon the Fall trade.

Some complaint of the scarcity of money in the interior is made, which scarcity is in part due to a wider distribution of legal-tenders than was known previous to the crop of last season. In payment for cotton large sums have gone to the South, and been retained in aid of their extended and profitable employments, and it is not probable that hereafter there will be such a redundancy in any quarter as to produce inconvenience. The absorption of part of the credit circulation by the South is of great advantage, as it creates an interest for the protection of the system which prevails and gives assurance of their strength. They will be substantial customers in Northern markets.

With the exception of the belt of country extending in front of the Alleghanies, from New-York into Georgia, the weather has been favorable for crops, and even in that district for all crops excepting corn. Corn has been severely damaged there, and in many fields entirely destroyed. Taking the whole country together, the crops are large so far as gathered, and promise, with the exception of corn along those parts of the Atlantic coast, to be abundant.

It would appear, therefore, that there is good foundation for active and profitable business during the present season.

The Washington Insurance Company disclaims ownership of the worthless securities which were revealed by the surrender of the box stolen from the Company's office. The Secretary protests that it should not be classed among the patrons of the "dubious investments" on which we commented yesterday. Its securities, he adds in a letter already printed, are negotiable and safe.

According to the Citizen & Round Table, there is a possibility that Hon. EDWARD BURKE, of New-Hampshire, will revive the National Intelligencer as a Democratic paper, and will issue the first number upon the opening of the ensuing session of Congress. There is more chance of success in this project of revival than in the preposterous plan lately broached, which promised not so much a "resurrection" of the famous old journal as a sort of unhallowed body-snatching.

The Republican Party in Maryland.

A certain fatality seems to afflict the counsels of the Republican Party in localities where wisdom, forbearance, unity, and strength are most needed for success.

Maryland affords a case in point. The Republican Party there struggles for an existence. In the contest for Governor in 1867 it polled only 25 per cent., and in the Presidential contest last year only 23 per cent. of the popular vote. It has but a solitary representative in Congress, and in the State Legislature has no foothold whatever. It is weak and surrounded by difficulties which nothing but perseverance, moderation, and consummate judgment can hope to surmount.

Yet the Maryland Republicans are always at loggerheads. The little strength they possess is wasted in dissensions. The spirit of faction marks them for its own. A few individuals band themselves together and call themselves the party, and having devised tests suitable to their own ends, they stigmatize and drive out all who withhold recognition of their authority. Instead of working energetically for the promotion of a common object, the Republicans of the State are all the time engaged in intestine quarrels. So far are they from uniting to build up a party that shall be respectable in the eyes of the country and effective in State affairs, that we never hear of them except in connection with squabbles or with the distribution of local offices.

The address of Judge BOND and others, in yesterday's TIMES, tells the old story. Some of the most reputable and influential Republicans of the State, having objected to the course of members of the Committee, find themselves threatened with excommunication and the penalties thereof. Their political standing is unquestionable; they are supporters of Congress and the Administration; and they have made sacrifices which entitle them to party respect and confidence. But they refuse to pronounce the shibboleth which some one has invented for his own use, and must, therefore, be put down. Falsehoods are coined to damage them. Misrepresentation is employed to justify an attempted proscription which is utterly unjustifiable.

Judge BOND and his friends appeal from a clique in Baltimore to the party throughout the State, and, indirectly, to the party throughout the country. They declare that the rumors impeaching to them connection with "the Chase movement," whatever that may be, have no foundation in fact. They profess loyalty to the Republican Party, and they declare—we have no doubt truly—that the difficulties and differences of the party in Maryland are either "personal in their character" or relate to matters concerning which Republicans "ought, with mutual kindness, to differ."

The circumstance teaches a lesson by which Republicans, other than those of Maryland, may profit. It is a lesson which those of the South generally may advantageously study.

What intolerance and selfish intrigue in party affairs lead to, may be learned from the history of the party in this City. Dissension and disgust, with defeat superadded, are among the results. Republican strength in the State has averted some consequences and mitigated the force of others. But similar causes, operating where the republican element is weak, cannot fail to produce disasters. They have retarded its growth in Maryland, and will impair its usefulness in every Southern State into which they gain admission.

The potency of a party depends upon adherence to the great principles which underlie its organization and impart excellence to its work. It cannot prosper when its organization and influence are perverted to sinister or malignant personal ends. To this law the Republican Party is no exception, and if its hold upon communities like Maryland is to be enlarged and strengthened, it must cultivate toleration and that general liberty of judgment which is compatible with fidelity to principle.

The Boston Intemperate Convention.

That "fine words butter no parsnips" is a proposition we are not disposed to deny, but that coarse words are equally inefficient in buttering parsnips, and considerably more disagreeable for some other purposes, is a truth also, we think, beyond dispute. It is a truth, however, often forgotten in public assemblies; it seems to have been, if not forgotten, very essentially ignored in the Prohibitionists' Convention held the other day in Boston, and by clerical as well as by lay delegates. Rev. Dr. A. A. MINER, for example, who bitterly opposed Governor ANDREW, two years ago, on the temperance question, and who now leads the very tip, so to speak, of the extreme radical wing in the prohibition ranks, was especially virulent against all his opponents. This amiable apostle said:

"Who did not know that there were two classes of people in this community, the perfect antipodes to each other; one class was marching to the music of demons, under the colors of the devil, guided and counseled by the Boston Post, the Boston Journal and the Boston Transcript. The other class was marching to the music of angels, in some measure guided and controlled by the faithful though humble Notes, all the religious Press of the State, and possessing the benediction of the Most High."

This most intemperate apostle of temperance goes on:

"As there was joy in heaven over one sinner that repented, so there was delight in hell at the daily issues of the Post, Journal and Transcript. Who did not know that the chief occupation of the Boston daily presses, with one exception, was to call black white and white black?"

Now what think you, good reader, awaited this tirade? Deprecation, dissent, displeasure? Not at all. We are told that "Mr. MINER'S remarks were received with uproarious enthusiasm, and he was again and again cheered."

After that, we are not surprised to learn that a resolution praising Governor CLAFLIN for his services to the prohibition cause was strongly objected to, on the ground that that officer had once appointed a Judge who was accustomed occasionally "to indulge." Mr. EDWARD BRIDGMAN denounced some of the Boston papers as "liars" and "scamps;" other speakers were equally violent. The moral of it all is that for some men it is clearly easier to be temperate in liquor than in language, and that "prohibition," interpreted by these extremists, means not only prohibition of ardent spirits, but of the exercise of private judgment.

Mr. Pendleton's Strong Point.

The Democratic candidate for the Governorship of Ohio is alleged by his partisan friends to be sound and consistent on the currency question. We are told that, "as a statesman and a political economist," he is predominently pledged "to restore specie payments and to make a hard-money currency the sole legal tender." For this service, it is said, "GEORGE H. PENDLETON is the man." And, by way of evidence, reference is made to his persistent opposition to greenbacks and the legislation which preceded their issue.

In a certain sense Mr. PENDLETON is undoubtedly consistent. When the creation of a currency was a necessity of the war, it encountered no more strenuous opponent than the gentleman whom the Ohio Democracy have selected for their standard bearer. His aim then was to break down the credit of the Government, and so to render the further prosecution of the war impossible, and he endeavored to accomplish his object by assailing and depreciating the nation's currency.

Pursuing the same policy, Mr. PENDLETON has since the war lost no opportunity of doing what he could to impair the national credit. He makes a direct attack upon it when he proposes to violate the contract entered into with the public creditor, and to redeem m'greenbacks, obligations made payable in gold. Mr. PENDLETON'S policy is a policy of repudiation, the mere promulgation of which was injurious, and the adoption of which would be absolutely ruinous to the credit of the Government.

Mr. PENDLETON'S consistency, then, is the consistency of a man whose sympathy with the rebellion led him to oppose measures employed to suppress it; and whose hostility to the authority established by the war manifests itself in antagonism to the financial system which contributed to the Union triumph. It is not improbable that this kind of consistency recommended him to the State Democratic Committee that nominated him. We do not believe, however, that it is a consistency which will secure the favor of a State that owes the proudest chapter in its annals to its part in resisting enemies of whom Mr. PENDLETON was the scarcely disguised apologist.

Apart from the uniformity of his course as an enemy of the public credit, Mr. PENDLETON is grossly inconsistent. As a hard-money Democrat he might be supposed to desire the early resumption of specie payments. As the author and chief advocate of a scheme for paying the five-twenties in greenbacks, he does what he can to postpone resumption indefinitely.

The Pendleton scheme involves further issues of greenbacks. Its friends protest against the imputation that these further issues would be unlimited. But Mr. PENDLETON himself has confessed that more greenbacks will be required for the attainment of his object, and in no other manner would it be attainable. In addition to repudiation, therefore, he would inflict upon the country a renewal of inflation, of which the inevitable effect would be to consign specie payments to a remote and uncertain future.

The New-York Citizen & Round Table, a literary, political and family journal formed by the consolidation of two well-known and excellent weekly papers, now appears in a new shape, and with many new attractions. Its present form is that of the old Round Table, but it is one-half larger, containing twenty-four pages instead of sixteen. The consolidated journal is edited with signal ability, and seems to have most happily combined all the good features of the two papers, which, during six years of separate existence, gained so high and well-merited a place in popular favor. United, their value is more than doubled; and the very large increase of circulation with which the consolidated paper starts, is destined, we trust, to an indefinite increase.

The Board of Health of this City, which by its charter is also a guardian of life, has urged upon the Fire Commissioners the appointment of an inspector of kerosene and other burning fluids. The Fire Commissioners, in referring the request to a committee, suggested, instead, the use of some instrument not yet invented, by which consumers can test the quality of the oil which they purchase. This idea is hardly practicable; consumers cannot or will not buy the instrument, and few would understand its use. We need more an officer to prosecute the dealers who adulterate it with cheap and dangerous benzine and naphtha.

We reprinted, a few days since, from the Fortnightly Review, SWINBURNE'S enthusiastic eulogy on VICTOR HUGO'S L'Homme qui Rit. The London Pall Mall Gazette, a journal whose critical reputation stands very high, totally dissents from SWINBURNE'S estimate of the work, and describes it as "the maddest of all mad books ever written by a man of genius," and as being, in one part at least, "inexcusably filthy." In addition, the Gazette exposes many technical and historical blunders into which the novelist has fallen, partly through "ignorance of England," and partly through his "desire to abuse that country."

The World very justly complains of the fence, which, in inclosing a portion of the Park, incloses also most of the sidewalk on Park-row and on Broadway. There can be no sufficient reason for depriving the public of the use of these sidewalks, which are used probably by more people every day than the same length of walk in any other part of the City.

An honest but credulous countryman writes to us that he has been swindled by a New-York Gift Enterprise Company, in which he invested money on the strength of a pretended indorsement from this paper, quoted in their circular. We are sorry for him, but if he has gained a little wisdom by the loss of a few dollars, he cannot be said to have thrown his money away. He might have drawn a prize and fared worse.

AMUSEMENTS.

Tammany.

The numerous attractions of this bustling establishment, as varied, glittering and unsubstantial as the reflections of a kaleidoscope, are again disclosed for the gratification of that vast proportion of the public which demands nothing beyond gaudy show for its evening's enjoyment, and accepts as a matter of choice that species of theatrical entertainment which never is adorned by wit or overweighted with common sense. The tastes and inclinations of those for whom the understanding of an ordinary dramatic performance is an intellectual impossibility, and who yet insist upon their right to lively and harmless popular exhibitions of some description, are compassionately recognized and industriously provided for by the managers of the Fourteenth-street resort. The programmes are quite as profuse and as diversified as those of last season. There is a burlesque, with conventionally idiotic rhymes and incoherent songs; truly brilliant scenery, fair music, ingenious and often artistic dances, and occasional thrilling displays of acrobatic daring. In this there is a great deal to amuse, nothing to offend, and comparatively little to fatigue, the dialogue being passed over with praiseworthy rapidity and indistinctness. There is also a pantomime, of the kind with which the LAURIS and other English players have made us acquainted, which is not wholly destitute of originality, and frequently provokes merriment. These are the attractions of the large hall. The smaller apartments, below, are occupied by exhibitors of skillfully-trained animals, and by a party of professors from the London Polytechnic Institute, who produce each evening a series of that curious and interesting optical illusions which have of late years been conspicuous in the entertainments of enterprising conjurors. The most striking novelty is undoubtedly the performance of a diver, named CURZ, who, while submerged in a large aquarium, accomplishes a variety of extraordinary tasks, eating, drinking and smoking beneath the surface of the water with the utmost apparent ease. The audiences at Tammany have thus far been very large, and the season opens with every indication of prosperity.

INCIDENTALS.

Hon. JOHN COBURN, member of Congress from Indiana, sent the first acceptance of an invitation to attend the Convention in St. Louis in favor of the removal of the national capital. He says the right thing is proposed, and that the object of the movement will be to stop vast outlays of money at Washington, in the building of a grand central extension of the Capitol, of new and vast buildings for the War Department, the Navy and the State Department, with a Supreme Court-house, and a great library.

The Boston papers report that the Executive Committee of the Peace Jubilee will, in a few days, make their report, which has been unaccountably delayed, of the different items of expenditure.

The cane to be presented to Ex-Secretary SEWARD by the Society of California Pioneers, is made of California iron-wood, with a head composed of forty-one triangular pieces of quartz, specimens obtained from twenty of the leading mines of the State, mounted in solid gold. Four of the sides contain engravings of the coat-of-arms of California, an antelope, a flock of grouse, and a grizzly bear. The top of the head of the cane opens and displays in the interior specimens of gold dust, cinnabar, gold-bearing quartz, copper ore, sulphurets, quartz crystals, and black sand containing gold and platina.

A young man who was arrested in Boston recently, charged with having fractured the skull of a person who insulted his mother, has been discharged. It is related of him that he has been remarkable for his industry and his devotion to his mother and her small children, and that he has been frequently known to go barefooted in the Winter that his brothers might have the necessaries of life.

LONDON, Aug. 18.—The Times to-day has an article on the subject of affairs in Spain, suggested by the recent shooting by the Government forces of nine Carlist prisoners. The Times says the news is hardly more cheerful than that to which BRAVO accustomed us. Many people of Spain are confident that a continuance of the present Government must lead CARLOS to the throne. If such is the end of rampant Carlism—to regain power, we have no doubt that blood would be shed as wantonly and iniquitously to put Carlism down as it has contributed to build it up.

The time of the Oxfords was a few seconds less, and they took thirty-six strokes per minute. The betting stands five to two on Oxford.

The session will probably last a week, and among the scientific reports expected will be one on the recent eclipse. About 300 members were present to-day.

In the afternoon, by invitation, the members of the Association attended the dedicatory services of the Museum of the Peabody Academy of Science, which took place in the Tabernacle Church. They consisted of prayer by Rev. CHARLES R. PALMER; an address from the President of the Academy, W. C. BENEDICT, Esq., and remarks from other gentlemen. GENTLEMEN: As you will perceive by the inclosed instrument of trust, I wish to place in your hands, for the benefit and use of your successors, the sum of one hundred and forty thousand dollars, for the promotion of science and useful knowledge in the County of Essex.

Of late, my native county, I have always been justly proud, in common with all her sons, remembering her unshaken republicanism, her many illustrious patriots and men of mark in the past, her distinguished record from the earliest days of our country's history, and the distinction so long retained by her, as eminent in the education and morality of her citizens.

I was desirous of adding to my position, as I may, some share of contributing to posterity, and aiding through her means in the diffusion of science and knowledge; and, after consultation with some of her most eminent and worthy citizens, and encouraged by the success which has attended the labors of the learned and worthy men of the distinguished Scientific Association of which your Chairman is President, and with which most of you are connected, I am led to hope that this gift may be instrumental in attaining the desired end.

I therefore transmit to you the inclosed instrument, and a check for the amount therein expressed, ($140,000), with the hope that the trust so administered by you and your successors, may tend to advancement in intelligence and virtue, not only in our good old county of Essex but in our commonwealth, and in our common country.

READING, Penn., Aug. 18.—President GRANT and party passed through here at 3 P. M. in a special train, en route for the Schuylkill coal region. The train stopping ten minutes where a crowd had assembled, the President appeared on the platform in response to calls, and briefly expressed his satisfaction with his visit to that section of the State, after which he submitted to prolonged hand-shaking until the train moved off. THE ASSESSING OF REVENUE SUPERVISORS.

The meeting of Revenue Supervisors from the East and West to consult with Commissioner DELANO, is likely to result in augmented facilities for carrying out the provisions of the Revenue laws in districts where the officials have hitherto experienced a great many difficulties. In the case of E. A. CAWDREY and others against the Galveston and Houston Railroad and others, Mr. Justice SWAYNE has made a decree holding the railroad, &c., of the old Company subject to the mortgages, and dismissing that part of the complaint which claimed the property of the successor Company and an individual liability of the defendants. Both parties take an appeal to the Supreme Court. CAWDREY, representing the bondholders, is placed in possession of the railroad until the appeals are determined, by giving security to account for the rents and profits while in possession.

HAYTI.

Advices by the Port-au-Prince—Capture of Jacmel by Salnave—Expected Surrender of Aux Cayes—Piratical Acts of the Quaker City and Florida.

The steamship City of Port-au-Prince, which arrived at this port last evening, brings dates from Port-au-Prince to the 7th, and Cape Haytien to the 9th of August.

SALNAVE was still encamped before Aux Cayes, and had the place completely surrounded. It was daily expected that it would surrender. Jacmel had been taken by SALNAVE's troops without resistance.

The Government has made a contract for the purchase of the iron-clad Atlanta from Mr. SIDNEY DAKEMIRE, a lawyer of New-York, who returns by the City of Port-au-Prince.

The steamers Quaker City and Florida, both flying the Haytien rebel flag, forced the Port-au-Prince away from Gonaives, to which port she was bound. Each vessel brought her guns to bear on the ship, with all hands piped to quarters. They refused all communication with the shore, not even allowing her to take off the American Consul.

The City of Port-au-Prince towed to this port the schooner Mary Jane, bound from St. Domingo to Boston, which she fell in with on the 15th inst. in lat. 22 43 N., lon. 74 08 W., with her helm lashed and drifting about. Her Captain and two of the crew had died of yellow fever, and the remainder of the crew (two men) were in a dying condition, and were unable to throw overboard the bodies of their comrades, which were found on the deck in a state of putrefaction.

PERSONAL.

Professor CHARLES DEXTER, of Cleveland, at one time Professor of Latin Language in the University of the City of New-York, died suddenly in Philadelphia, yesterday. During President LINCOLN's Administration he acted as Consul of Cardiff, Wales. He was well known in the literary world as the author of several valuable classical works and text books.

Board of Health.

The Metropolitan Board of Health held a meeting yesterday afternoon, which was presided over by Commissioner G. B. LINCOLN.

On motion of Commissioner STEPHEN SMITH, the Secretary was directed to request all of the hospitals within the metropolitan district to report to the Board, every month, the number of cases admitted by them of persons injured by street cars, together with all the particulars concerning the same.

A complaint was presented against the St. Francisco Hospital, located in East Fifth-street, which was alleged by the complainants—residents of the neighborhood—to be an intolerable nuisance. Beside the emission of foul odors, the complaint charged indecent exposures of inmates at the windows. The matter was referred to the Sanitary Superintendent.

Many other items of business were passed upon by the Board, but nothing of much public importance, and an adjournment for one week was finally resolved upon.

Another Case of Hydrophobia.

A little girl, who had resided with her parents in Jersey City, was bitten by a dog on the 21st day of July last, and died yesterday morning in the most horrible agony in consequence. Nothing was thought of the bite at the time it was inflicted, so slight was it, nor were there any indications of approaching hydrophobia earlier than 10 o'clock on Tuesday evening. Coroner WARREN, who was notified, merely viewed the body, and then gave a permit for its burial.

Burglary in Greenwich-street—Capture of the Burglars.

During Tuesday night the furnishing store of THOMAS MCLAUGHLIN, No. 270 Greenwich-street, was entered by burglars, who forced open the rear door, and, after thoroughly ransacking the premises, escaped unobserved, taking with them property valued at $60. Subsequently, however, Captain ULMAN, of the Third Precinct, and Detectives MCCOVEY and WILLOUGHBY, at No. 91 Grand-street, arrested EDWARD QUINN, and MICHAEL DOOLEY and JOHN ROBINSON, at No. 223 Sullivan-street, in whose possession a large portion of the stolen property was found. The prisoners are well-known depredators, and both QUINN and ROBINSON have done the State some service, the former having been discharged from Sing Sing on Monday last, and ROBINSON only a few days before. The prisoners will be arraigned this morning at the Tombs Police Court.

Colonel BLISS, Attorney of the Board, reported verbally that a quality of the new oil called "Astral," manufactured by Messrs. PRATT, DEVOE & Co., and by them guaranteed to be non-explosive, had been examined by the chemist, and had been found to be below the required test.

A Kerosene Inspector Wanted.

The Fire Commissioners had under consideration yesterday at their regular meeting the request of the Sanitary Superintendent, Dr. HARRIS, asking for the appointment of an officer to test kerosene oil. The application was referred to the Committee on Combustibles, with instructions to ascertain if an instrument cannot be made so simple as to be used by any person, and all consumers of the oil thus made testers of its properties.

Fire Department Inspection—A Practical Proof of the Efficiency of the Firemen.

The arrival of Captain E. M. SHAW, Chief Officer of the Metropolitan Fire Brigade of London, and the purpose of his visit, have been stated in the TIMES, and also the fact that he would yesterday review a portion of our Fire Department at 3 o'clock, at Tompkins-square. Chief Engineer KINGSLAND had an interview with Captain SHAW at his hotel, the Brevoort House, and arranged with him for the carrying out of his purpose to fully inform himself of the condition of the New-York Fire Department. The programme included, as a first step, a formal inspection at Tompkins, and at the designated hour of 3 o'clock P. M., the following companies were on the ground, with their apparatus, and all under the command of District Engineer REYNOLDS: Hook and Ladder No. 1, Captain KING; Engine No. 1, Captain POINTON; Engine No. 9, Captain SULLIVAN; Engine No. 13, Captain ENLACHER; Engine No. 14, Captain WILSON, and Engine No. 26, Captain MCNEIL. In a few moments Commissioners SHALER, WILSON and GALWAY and Chief Engineer KINGSLAND appeared on the ground, and it was announced that the review by Captain SHAW would be postponed until to-day, at the same hour and place. The companies on the ground were then drilled for a few moments and dismissed.

In consequence of this postponement, the first view which Captain SHAW had of our Fire Department was one where its practical efficiency was plainly apparent. At 11 o'clock P. M. Chief Engineer KINGSLAND caused alarm signal No. 145 to be given, which indicated a fire at the corner of Broadway and Broome-street. In company with Captain SHAW he had previously repaired to the designated point, and although no warning had been given to the companies, and they supposed they were answering a genuine alarm, in four minutes from the time the alarm was given the engines were on the spot, and No. 13, Captain ENLACHER, had taken a hydrant and was throwing a stream. Captain SHAW expressed himself as highly pleased with this marvelous celerity, and with the engines and trucks, all of which he minutely examined.

Arrest of Burglars.

About 10 o'clock last evening Officer WYNNE, of the Sixth Precinct, noticed two men in Cortlandt-alley carrying a trunk and acting in a suspicious manner. When he accosted them they were unable to give any satisfactory account of the matter, and he therefore arrested them. When taken to the Franklin-street Police Station they gave their names as GEORGE HOFFMAN and JOSEPH GREENWOOD, and confessed that they had committed a burglary at No. 366 Broadway. The trunk being examined, was found to contain shirts and velvets valued at $600. The prisoners were locked up, and will be arraigned at the Tombs Police Court this morning.

PROHIBITION.

Address and Resolutions of the Massachusetts State Prohibitory Convention.

The address to the people of Massachusetts, reported by Senator MERRIAM, from the Committee on the subject, and adopted by the Massachusetts State Prohibitory Convention in Boston on Tuesday, is as follows:

FELLOW CITIZENS: The cause that has called us together, and which is brought so prominently before you in the debates and issues of the hour, is not unknown to you. We urge you to consider a reform against the evils which you have long deplored and sought to restrain, and whose principles you have frequently and largely supported. For more than thirty years you have approved the prohibiting by law the sale of intoxicating liquors as a beverage. The Legislatures by you elected have, with but two exceptions, supported or enacted statutes of this character. These exceptions were overruled by the decision of the people the year after they occurred, so that the sober and earnest purpose has been steadfastly in one direction. From the beginning of the History of our Commonwealth this principle has been recognized, and in some degree acted upon. Its friend Governor, John WINTHROP, clearly discerned and approved the right of prohibitory laws enacted by the General Court during his administration, prohibiting the drinking of healths, the most injurious form of this vice that then prevailed. The principle was then recognized from the start that what is clearly injurious to the State can be forbidden by the State. When this reform revived over fifty years ago it speedily assumed a legal no less than a moral and social character. Its advocates claimed that what was manifestly injurious to the well-being of the people could be extirpated by the people.

The first attempts were to control this evil by punishing those who should indulge in it to manifest excess, and by limiting the number of the places where it should be sold, as well as the circumstances that should govern the sale. Even under these restrictions, advance was made, and "the Fifteen-gallon law," so called, was a great stride in the direction of prohibition.

But in the growth of public sentiment, it was soon seen that the punishing of the victims while increasing, under any circumstances, those who reach the point of excess, rendered it impracticable. It did not put the axe at the root of the root tree. It plucked the fruit, and allowed the tree to grow. Therefore, the next and inevitable step was taken, and the drunkard maker was considered a criminal, the bar and grog shop extirpated, and the sale for a beverage prohibited.

That law was a great success. It relieved the Commonwealth in its rural towns and larger villages of the baleful presence of the bar, the tavern scoop, the cognegery, and made the drunkard, before so common, almost an exciting curiosity. Except as he was introduced from other States or from the capital of our own State, or from some of our larger cities that copied its baleful example.

The war relaxed the energies of the people in this work, and allowed license of every sort. Many of our incoming citizens from other lands brought with them habits from which our own population have become largely cured. Boston thought fit to repeal the law. Intelligence was needed to attract trade to its market, and a new and trusted leader, foremost in the work of a kindred and not inferior reform, who had given the State a triumphant record and himself an immortal fame in the national conflict, sent his great powerful voice to plead against the use of rum.

The State went back. It enacted a license law. It made its guards high, its penalties severe. But those who supported it refused to enforce it, and rum flowed down our streets like a river. The pauperism of the State increased in a single year, according to the declaration of the State Board of Charities, twenty-five per cent, or almost exactly one-fourth. Our jails grew so populous that the Governor in his message to the Legislature declared their enlargement would be necessary if the License law was retained upon the statute book. Misery sprang up in many a dwelling, both of wealth and poverty. Young men lay drunk along our sidewalks and under the walls of Boston Common. The devastation swelled fearfully on every side.

Again the people rose and restored the law which had been repealed. The people voted for that iniquity to prevail. Their moral sense revived, and they saw that only prohibition could save the State. This they have enacted. It is again assailed. Leagues are formed for its overthrow; journals of respectability and influence denounce it; politicians put forward it; rum-sellers pour out their money for its repeal; our foreign population are appealed to with inflammatory harangues from those who care nothing for them, but only for their own pecuniary, personal or political interests.

To you, the people of this ancient Commonwealth, against these combining forces of intemperance, we, your fellow-citizens in Convention assembled, appeal. We are not legally, but we trust we are morally, your representatives. We are of you and from you and with you. It is our own great State, our common pride and joy, the grave of our fathers and the cradle of our children, that is in peril through the machinations of evil men. For its salvation we appeal.

Your law has been enacted by your Legislature and approved by your Governor. It has already proved itself of immense benefit. It has put thousands and hundreds upon the fearfulest haunt of ruin, the bar-room, almost an obsolete institution. If supported by you, it will carry this reform to its desired consummation.

It is before you to-day for confirmation. Your course in the primary meetings, in the State conventions, in legislative nominations, at the polls, will be of the utmost importance. See to it that only true prohibitory men are chosen for the nominating conventions. Efforts may there be made to put nominees and platforms before you that will approve of license and overthrow our excellent law. See to it that you put such men in those conventions as will put in nomination those candidates that are true to our principles.

The people of this State having for a generation declared in favor of prohibition, the parties that go before them for their suffrage should avow this as one of their principles. Without a party will do this just duty will receive such support and win such success as never before was given it.

Be careful to elect true men to the Legislature. Let no party feuds, no private nor personal ambitions, no indifference, no carelessness, prevent the selection and election of such men. Send the right men to the State House, both in the executive and legislative departments. Let not your enemy triumph over you.

The cause, fellow-citizens, is not confined within our own borders. It is a reform to which all the world is looking. All the world are looking to you this hour. Every State in New-England hangs on your decision. The great West is struggling after the same end. In Oregon and Ohio, Pennsylvania and New-York, Illinois and Michigan, parties are being organized on the ground of prohibition. In England and Scotland the reform is spreading. The Primate of the English Church, the Archbishop of Canterbury, makes it a special topic of consideration at his conventions, and Archbishop MANNING, the head of the Roman Catholic Church in England, has, while he has declared himself the earnest men of every other church are uniting in this work.

If this State puts it on her banners, it will go forth everywhere to conquer. It will renew the South in righteousness. It will arrest the great evil that now imperils our institutions. It will save our young men from the ruin that everhangs them. It will uplift our foreign population in virtue and comfort. It will deliver our great and growing metropolis from the evil that has so long possessed it. It will repress very largely crime, pauperism and misery of every sort, and advance mankind along the path of all true progress to its destined perfection.

THE RESOLUTIONS.

The resolutions reported and adopted by the Convention are as follows:

Whereas, The people of this Commonwealth, through their legislative representatives, have enacted a law prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors as a beverage, we, representatives of the citizens of the Commonwealth in convention assembled, in behalf of the people of this State do hereby resolve:

1. The use of intoxicating liquors as a beverage has ever proved an injury to mankind, as is shown by the attempts in all our history as a Commonwealth, and in that of other nations to limit and restrain their use and sale.

2. This confession of all ages and countries is strengthened by the convictions of our own generation, as is seen in the movements in this country and in Great Britain for the abandonment of their use and the suppression of their sale.

3. This reform has made vast progress within the last fifty years in abolishing largely those beverages from the cabin, the sitting-room and the social circle, in arresting the action of the church in raising her members from childhood to age that has been largely kept free from habits that had previously been of universal indulgence.

4. This reform is not only social and moral, but like all others that seek the purity and upbuilding of society, must be supported by law the sale of that which, by the confession of philanthropists of all ages, has been a chief source of poverty and crime.

5. The mode of treating a popular vice has always been adopted and will always be adopted. Thus gambling was denounced as wrongful and harmful, and then legally suppressed; thus lotteries were adjudged and prohibited; thus duelling was condemned and forbidden; thus slavery was arraigned and extirpated. The prohibition, therefore, of the sale of intoxicating liquors as a beverage proceeds on a principle with the beneficent laws which all other nations have adopted that mark the progress of mankind have marched to victory—first, a clear proof of the dangerous character and influence upon society of the evils opposed, and then the abolishment of them by law.

6. The statistics of boards and officers of prisons, alms-houses and charitable institutions show that not less than one-half of the pauperism and crime of the land is directly caused by the use of intoxicating liquors as a beverage, while a large portion of the remainder are indirectly caused by the same indulgence.

7. As the State has to support its paupers and criminals, it has the right to forbid the public sale of that which makes them such, and all attempts to deny that right are answered by the fact that those who pretend to oppose this prohibition are themselves compelled to attempt its restriction and defilement.

8. It is an infringement of personal liberty to defile the sale of that which is harmful in its indulgence, and is the cause of general suffering and crime. The claim of personal liberty in dueling, boxing, cruel amusements and gambling, is as consistent and strong as that of personal liberty to indulge in the drinking of poisonous beverages, and the prohibition of their sale for these purposes is no more an infringement upon personal liberty than the prohibition of those other indulgences which society has long since forbidden, and in whose extirpation all good citizens rejoice.

9. This danger from the use of these intoxicating drinks is further increased by the fearful adulteration of these beverages, so that every class from the mildest to the strongest are intoxified in all their evil effects by the active and deadly substances of which they are compounded.

10. The Prohibitory law enacted by our Legislature is a wise statute which in its provisions form received the indorsement of the Supreme Court of Massachusetts and of the United States, and proved itself very successful in the suppression of the sale and use of intoxicating liquors as a beverage in a large majority of the towns of this Commonwealth; and but for the opening of the liquor-sellers, themselves would have succeeded in the abolition of this use and traffic in all the State. It has already, in the few years since its enactment, accomplished much good in the abolishing of many of the offenders who whose liquors were sold, and if sustained it will purge the State of this vice and give her a material prosperity that can never otherwise be obtained.

11. We hereby pledge ourselves to do all in our power to maintain this law upon our statute books, and to secure its impartial and complete enforcement.

12. We hereby call on the political parties of the Commonwealth to insert in their platforms the approval of prohibition, as a principle right in itself, of the highest benefit to the people, that has been approved by the State for the last thirty years, and in its present form for the last fifteen years, except a single year of falling away. It is, therefore, as compatible with the policy of the State, that its representative parties should indorse it and adopt it as their own.

13. The party that for nearly twenty years has controlled the administration of our State government is especially bound to recognize this principle. If it would continue to direct the counsels of the State. To its successful controversy with a gigantic national crime should now be added its controversy with another crime, national no less than local; and in which, if it is as faithful as it has been in that duty, still larger

THE ENGLISH FORGERS.

Arrival of Sergeant Spittle to take the Prisoners—The Last Scene in the Case.

The readers of the TIMES have been fully informed of the arrest of CLEMENT HARWOOD and JOHN HATCHER, charged with having committed a forgery in England, and all subsequent proceedings in the case, including the return of the fugitives to England in charge of Detective IRVING, on the day succeeding that on which a telegram was received from Inspector BAILEY, of the City Police, London, announcing that an officer would leave to take charge of the prisoners. This decisive step was taken by Superintendent KENNEDY as the only means to frustrate the efforts of those attorneys who were about to invoke the writ of habeas corpus in behalf of the accused, which the Superintendent knew must result in their discharge, and, what was worse, in putting in their hands all the money which had been taken from them.

The prisoners gone, and the money with them, the case was dropped out of the list of current news until yesterday, when it was revived by the arrival of Sergeant SPITTLE, of the City Police, London, who had been dispatched across the ocean to take charge of prisoners who had already reached London in charge of Detective IRVING. Sergeant SPITTLE was accompanied by the complainant in the case and his solicitor, and these parties yesterday morning had a protracted interview with Superintendent KENNEDY, at the Central Police Office. As one result of this conference it was found that no information whatever as to the transactions of the forgers was to be given to the public, and this resolution called to mind the singular fact that no reference whatever has been made to the case in any English newspaper.

Love, Jealousy, Pistols and the F. B.

From the San Francisco Times, Aug. 7.

One of the little "unpleasantnesses" which frequently arise between men who form an undying attachment for the same woman has just occurred in this city, and we hasten to chronicle the fact that although both the combatants are considerably wounded, the result will not be utter annihilation. The case under consideration is one in which a German grocer said an American, a clerk in a ship-chandlery, both have a yearning for a beautiful young lady who has thus far shown no particular preference for either.

THE RIVALS FALL OUT—A BLOW.

Last Sunday the German lover, whom we will call HANS, called on the lady in question and invited her company to Dr. SCUDDER's church in the evening. She accepted the invitation and named the hour she would be ready to accompany him. Toward evening the American, whom we will designate as JONATHAN, called on the lady and settled himself in a chair by her side in a manner which indicated that he came to spend the evening. She told him that she had an engagement to attend church, but as HANS was not at hand when the hour appointed arrived, she went with JONATHAN. They listened to an eloquent sermon, and then started to return home. It seems that HANS had been belated, and on finding that his rival had stepped in between him and the object of his adoration, he became exceeding wroth. He hung round the door of the church until the services were over, and then walked with heavy heart down the street. On glancing over his shoulder he saw the hated JONATHAN with the beautiful lady leaning on his arm. He immediately turned and confronted them, and shaved through his back in the fair one, "Neck'woman, you!" The words had no sooner escaped from his lips than JONATHAN struck him a blow that sent him reeling into the gutter. HANS soon picked himself up, and uttering in tones of thunder, "I'll say you for that!" turned on his heel and walked away.

A CHALLENGE.

On Monday morning, before JONATHAN was out of doors, a colored man came to the house with a note, on which was written: "I'll fight a duel with you—name your friend." A gentleman called before he had finished his breakfast, and announced that he was HANS' friend, and would make the arrangements for the duel. The two started down town, and on the way called on a gentleman, who, after a moment's private conversation with JONATHAN, was introduced as his "friend." The two "friends" held a consultation, and arranged that HANS and JONATHAN should fight a duel with pistols at 8 o'clock, in Alameda County. One of the friends was unexpectedly called out of the city on the day named, and the interesting event was postponed until yesterday.

TO THE FIELD OF CARNAGE.

At an early hour yesterday morning our reporter, while sauntering along the city front in search of items, saw four men, who were conversing in a low tone, at the Alameda Ferry landing. They seemed to be greatly concerned for fear they were being watched. The appearance of the party gave such strong indications of an item that our reporter followed them on to the boat, and at 7:30 A. M. they started across the Bay for the Alameda. On the trip our reporter fraternized with one of the friends, and listened on talking with him about the weather and the healthfulness of the climate. At length he convinced the man that he knew something was in the air, and that he would like to accompany the party as a spectator. The offer was accepted, and in a conversation subsequently held he learned that he was not a Police or other officer of the law in disguise. By this time the party were ready to disembark. They jumped aboard the cars, and in a few moments alighted at Schuizen Park. They traveled down Broadway to an open space in the grove, about half a mile southeast of the park, and here preparations were made for the duel. The solemn character of the meeting quite overcame the "friends," and they held a consultation to see if the bloody affair could not be avoided. The principals were growing more agitated every moment. At length the "friends" came forward and announced that with the consent of the principals the duel would be dispensed with, and the affair settled in accordance with the rules governing the pugilistic ring.

PUGILISTIC ENCOUNTER.

The hair-trigger pistols were placed back in the case; a ring was marked out on the ground, and the rivals commenced to shed their superfluous clothing. HANS, the weight about 160 pounds, stripped finely. JONATHAN, who only weighs about 135 pounds, looked much inferior to HANS in strength, but what he lacked in "heft" was fully made up in agility. "Time" was called, and the rivals came promptly to the scratch. A look of deep hatred passed from their eyes, and it was very evident that the ancient feud was about to be fitly settled by one. At first they were very cautious about their hits, and the sparring was anything but scientific. But they were not there to display their pugilistic training, they came for "blood." Soon the blows commenced to fall thick and heavy; hitting and parrying followed the tap of the hand and the knee being in order. The first round lasted about five minutes, and was terminated by JONATHAN giving HANS a terrible blow behind the ear, which sent him to earth. He did not even kick after he fell, and the little crowd gathered around him with fear and trembling. He soon returned to consciousness, and on calling "time," came up promptly to the scratch. Twenty-three rounds were fought in the same awkward style, JONATHAN proving in each the better man. The fight terminated by JONATHAN getting HANS' head in chancery. He did not like the smell, but he stood the punishment like a trump for about a minute, and then he cried: "Hold; go right away, now!" and tapped down upon the ground—JONATHAN taking advantage of the situation by falling heavily on him. JONATHAN was declared the victor; but he had paid for his all it was worth. Their faces were pounded out of shape and badly swollen. The blood was washed from their countenances, and with handkerchiefs adorning their heads, the honeyed march was commenced. The rivals agreed that they would go out of the city and remain until their bruises were healed, and then when they returned they would go together and visit the "innocent cause of the war," and abide by her decision.

On arriving in this city one of the rivals immediately departed for San Jose and the other for Haywood.

Death from Hydrophobia.

About three months since a young lad named ROBINSON, of West Jamaica, Long Island, was bitten by a dog supposed to be mad. As the wound healed up nicely, and the physicians were of the opinion that it was of no very serious nature, no fears were entertained as to the safety of the young man. On Monday, however, he was attacked with hydrophobia, and after suffering three fits died a most agonizing death.

Savagery on the Insurgent—Spanish Indignation—De Rodas and the Cable—Poison as an Auxiliary—Important Capture—War News—Rebel Assault on Portcrville—De Rodas's Bulletins—The Rising in Jaguey Grande.

From Our Own Correspondent.

HAVANA, Saturday, Aug. 14, 1869.

The contest now going on in this island is fast approaching the point of savageism for which all Spanish wars have been noted, and the Cubans seem to be determined to stop at nothing short of independence, even though such independence be accomplished at the ruin—thorough and complete—of the island they inhabit. The moment has approached when the timid can no longer take refuge in a declaration of neutrality and seemingly passive indifference. The line of demarkation is becoming traced so distinctly by the hostile factions that it is impossible to mistake it, and both parties have adopted the motto, "Whoever is not with me is against me." The adoption of this line of policy will at once have the effect of forcing into the ranks of either party that immense force known as the "doubtfuls," who have kept aloof thus far from any participation in the contest, and will cause the war to assume grander proportions, owing to the large reinforcements that will immediately rally to the support of the opposing banners. The Cubans, who have heretofore contented themselves with sympathizing with the revolution and praying for its success, will now be forced to take an active part in it, either for or against its accomplishment. They will be compelled to abandon the field of petty diplomacy and enter the more dangerous one of active operations. The recent descent made by the secret police of the Government, who swarm throughout the whole island, has really alarmed the little knots and clubs of Cubans scattered throughout the city, and a feeling is becoming prevalent among them that the era of a new reign of terror will shortly be inaugurated. Offers of clemency on the part of the Government, and of surrender on the part of the insurgents, do not enter into the speculations of the wildest dreamer; their era is considered past, and reason being excluded from all share in the contest, to brute force is left the task of deciding the issue of the struggle. The Spaniards are confident, the Cubans hopeful, and each party hurries itself in predicting its own triumph and drumming up recruits for its different forces to fill up the gaps which disease has caused among them. The Spanish Press are jubilant over the suppression of the Carlist movement in Spain, considering that the Home Government will now be able to give its undivided attention to the annihilation of the revolution here, and look forward to the coming of the promised 20,000 with feelings of joy impossible to describe. The Cubans, on the other hand, lean with an abiding faith on the hope that foreign complications and puerile alliances with South American Republics will ultimately give them possession of the long-coveted gem which Spain manifests so decided unwillingness to part with. Meanwhile, Spanish policy, seemingly as blind and as similar to that which lost to England her American colonies; to Austria her Italian provinces, and to Spain herself, her vast possessions in America, promises to accomplish more for the Cubans than their own efforts have yet made likely. This policy seems destined to tear it from her possession and cause it to sparkle in another setting.

DE RODAS AND THE CABLE.

General DE RODAS sent for the agent of the New-York Associated Press in this city, some time ago, and informed him that he was at liberty to send all kinds of news, favorable or unfavorable, to the Government, as a proper knowledge of the real state of affairs on the island would only redound to the credit of the Government. A telegram to this effect appeared in all American papers, and great gratification was the consequence. The practice of the Government censor of political telegrams to the New-York Associated Press is very different from the programme laid down by the Captain-General, and the censorship exists with all its former rigor. The agent of the Associated Press has informed your correspondent that his dispatch of last evening was prohibited from being transmitted through the cable owing to its non-approval by his Excellency. In his interview with the inspector of telegrams the agent inquired what objection there was to sending the telegram referred to—which, by the way, contained important news—and was informed that the General had given orders that no dispatch be passed over the wires which had not been published in the Gaceta. The Press agent remarked that he could not understand why an objection had been made to the sending of news that had already been published in the Diario and other journals. The inspector replied as the news was not official the Captain-General did not wish its transmission; "and further," remarked Mr. Inspector, "in sending on the statement of the number of forces, a great mistake occurred, the number of volunteers having been set down in the American papers at only 6,000 men, making a large difference." "But," replied the agent, "the mistake was rectified afterwards." "Ah, yes," rejoined the Inspector, "but several days after the effect had been produced already." It would appear from this that CABALLERO DE RODAS has considerable regard for what may be contained in the American journals and the "effect" produced in the United States, and this regard has induced him, doubtless, to pay especial regard to the transmission of telegrams over the cable. The news, therefore, that the Press will henceforth receive over the Cuban Cable will, if the recent order is strictly adhered to, be of a somewhat stale nature, especially if the old fogy Gaceta has to be waited on although the extreme attention of DE RODAS in taking care that the New-York Press shall only be supplied with the immaculate official dispatches of the Spaniards will, I think, hardly be duly appreciated by them.

POISON AS AN AUXILIARY.

If the reports contained in the Havana Press are true, the brutal character of the war, as waged on both sides, will soon have reached its culminating point. The Diario raises its pious hands in horror at the crimes with which it charges the Cuban rebels, but says nothing about the executions and incendiarisms of the Spaniards, which have called forth those acts of retaliation on the part of the insurgents. It seems to forget the lessons of history which teach us that justice is retributive. The virtuous Diario probably forgets that the use of poison as an element of destruction is not a new idea of the revolutionists of Cuba; it was brought into play long ago in the civil wars of Spain; therefore, its attempted use, so far happily frustrated, by them in Sancti Spiritus and Matanzas is nothing new in Spanish history. In order to give you an idea of the spirit of savage vindictiveness which characterises the struggle here, I give the subjoined extract from the Aurora of Matanzas, which contains an account of the last poisoning attempt of the rebels in Matanzas, which fortunately was prevented from being consummated by the timely confession of a negro:

"In Matanzas a case analogous to that of Sancti Spiritus has just occurred; but the astrocious attempt was frustrated, owing to a negro employed in the bakery, seduced into the plot, presenting himself to the authorities and denouncing this horrible attempt at poisoning, presenting at the same time the packages of strychnine which had been given him to put into the dough. The supposed author of this plan is a prisoner; has been tried and only awaits the decision of the Captain-General to have carried into effect on his person the fatal sentence which has been awarded him. How unmerciful and disconsolatory it is for honorable men to know that beings exist destitute of all moral sentiment and every noble idea!"

IMPORTANT CAPTURE.

Spanish accounts received here from Bayamo state that the forces of CANTEAC, the hero of the miraculous march, and PALACIOS, in combination with those of ANDRIANI and GONZALES BORT, effected a surprise of the insurgent forces under JORDAN, on their way from Holguin to Ramon, at a place called Remanganaqua, near Palma Soriano. The insurgents were in possession of a considerable convoy of war material, ammunition, and two cannon, all of which was captured by the Spaniards, with very slight resistance on the part of the insurgents. The carts, blacksmiths' forges, and other effects difficult to transport, were burned by the Spaniards, and the two cannon, with a considerable amount of shot, shell, grape and canister, were sent on to Manzanillo, to be there embarked for this city, where they have already arrived. The presence of VALMASEDA at this important capture would go to show that the great bulk of his forces were also present. No list is given of killed or wounded on either side, and the victory seems to have been a bloodless one for the Spaniards. The account states that the rebels made no effort at all to defend this train, and ran away on the first appearance of the Spanish forces. The Spaniards here are quite jubilant over the achievement, which they consider one of the grandest exploits of the whole war. The stores captured are supposed to be the last remnant of the material landed in the Bay of Nipe. The Cubans, strangely enough, also claim a victory; but how they can reconcile their statement with the presence of the cannon in this city as trophies, I cannot see. It is evident that the whole train was abandoned by JORDAN'S forces, as we have received no news of any fight having taken place.

WAR NEWS.

There is more than the usual amount of reported "battles" and skirmishes this week, the Cinco Villas district having been particularly prolific. An official report of RAFAEL DE SOUZA, dated 8th inst., states that the columns of Colonels SALINAS and TAQUIDAIN attacked in combination the rebel position at Arroyo Blanco, taking and destroying the rebel intrenchments, without the loss, on the Spanish side, of a single man. The loss of the insurgents "could not," naively says the report, "be ascertained, on account of a heavy shower which fell and prevented a reconnoissance from being practiced. In Remedios various detachments of regular and volunteer troops formed into a small column and marched out in quest of the rebels. They succeeded in surprising a party of them in the "Vega Chariano" woods, killing six whites—one of whom is supposed to be a leader—and wounding two others, who escaped to the mountains and could not be found. This same party of Spaniards also killed another insurgent in the Barracon of the Zaza River, destroying the quarters and intrenchments which the rebels had constructed there, after which exploits they returned to their cantonments without novelty. The column operating in the district of Sagua destroyed various intrenchments in the woods surrounding Hernando, and succeeded in killing one insurgent, having to lament on their own side the loss of a "movilizado" of the Sagua cavalry.

REBEL ASSAULT OR PORTREVILLO.

An extract from a private letter, published in the Diario of to-day, states that on the 9th inst. a force of 2,000 rebels, under command of El Polaco, Callejas, Villamil, Torres, Rodriguez and Doreteo, attacked the fortified village of Portreville, in the Partido of San Juan de las Lleras, District of Villa Clara, and, after maintaining a terrible fusillade on the entrenchments for over an hour, were compelled to retire, followed by the defenders of the village, who were unable, however, to come up with them again, owing to the rapidity with which they buried themselves in the recesses of the woods. The loss of the insurgents is put down in this account at forty killed, while that of the Spaniards consisted of the wife of Señor SOLIS, who was shot and killed by the rebels on attempting to pass from her house to the fort for security, and a guardia civil slightly wounded. On retiring from the attack the insurgents left in the hands of the Spaniards a flag, which bore on the union the inscription, "Patria y Libertad," (country and liberty,) "To the invincible POLACO." In this repulse the rebels lost seventeen killed, thirteen of whom were negroes and four whites. The immense majority of the rebel forces was composed of negroes, who, from their state of semi-nudity, presented a grotesquely terrible appearance. Almost all of them were without hats or shoes, using in place of those very necessary articles of dress, pieces of cowhide, which served, in the form of sandals, for shoes; their head covering consisting of the same material. It is stated that they retired in the direction of the Cannao Hills; but they are being rapidly followed by the column of Colonel PEREZ, and another encounter is speedily looked for. Another official dispatch of RAFAEL DE SOUZA, dated Santa Clara, the 10th inst., states that the column of troops under command of SALAYA, after two days constant marching, encountered the insurgents at La Sierra, on the 4th, and, attacking them at once, defeated them with a loss of five killed, two guns and seven horses, with various equipage. Spanish loss one soldier slightly wounded. The pursuit of the insurgents was continued as far as the farm of JOSE RODRIGUES, where they made a stand, and were again defeated, with a loss of three killed and nine horses, with their equipage.

MISCELLANEOUS.

DE LONZA, who seems destined to exceed all others in the number of his victorious official dispatches, furnishes us with another, dated the 11th inst., as flattering to the Spaniards as any of his former ones. It states that the column of Colonel AREAS, in combination with a detachment from Cumanayagua, divided themselves into three groups for the purpose of scouring the mountains of Mamon, and discovered various rebel pickets, who fled at the approach of the Spaniards, who only succeeded in capturing one JOSE IRENE LEON, who was pasado por las armas. The division of Lieutenant-Colonel BRAY exchanged fire with the enemy three times in the most inaccessible part of the mountains, dispersing them completely and, it is presumed, causing them some loss in men, capturing twenty-eight horses, correspondence, munitions, and other effects in one of their camps, which was destroyed, together with thirty horses and all else that it contained. The other division, under Captain MERAS, encountered a group of eight insurgents, who ran at the first glimpse of the Spaniards leaving them in peaceable possession of two horses. This campaign so brilliant (?) in its general character and results was completed on the 4th inst., and was followed by another on the 6th by the same column in the mountain De las Mascas, (of the dice.) A small party of insurgents was encountered and dispersed with the loss of one of their number killed. JOSE DOROTEO PEREZ, JUAN CASTELLON, white, and ALVAREZ and PEDROZA two free negroes were tried in Portreville for the crime of insurrection, and being found guilty were also disposed of in the usual manner, by being pasado por las armas.

The report of the rising in Jaguey Grande has been confirmed, and an encounter has taken place between the volunteers and the pronunciados, who received their opponents in ambuscade in the Calmito de la Hanabana, wounding three of the Movilizados in the encounter which took place. These three were part of the vanguard of the Spaniards. On the arrival of the main body the insurgents fled precipitately, suffering a loss of several of their number who were left in the Managua, at least so says the Spanish account contained in the Diario; the Cubans on the other hand claiming to have repulsed and badly defeated the Movilizados.

An account in the Diario of to-day states that on the 6th inst. the militia of Guines, under Colonel MENDUIRA, attacked an insurgent camp, putting it to flight, killing seven and wounding several, capturing nine horses and all the other effects which were abandoned by the rebels in their rapid flight. MENDUIRA received a contusion in the attack, not serious enough, however, to cause him to cease in his pursuit of the enemy, with whom he had another slight brush on the 7th, causing them a loss of two killed, several wounded, and dispersing them completely. A small party of volunteer and regular troops recently defeated the celebrated negro band commanded by the notorious incendiary, bandit and insurgent, ZACARIAS, a mulatto, whose name had become somewhat terrible in the neighborhood in which he operated. In this action his career came to a very sudden termination, however, as he was captured and shot with all possible dispatch by the Spaniards. Various other encounters have taken place and various rumors are afloat. One states that QUESADA had attacked a convoy with a force of 7,000 men, near Nuevitas—result unknown. Another, that the Spanish Colonel QUIRAS had defeated a number of rebels near Palma Soriano, killing ninety-five and routing them beyond all hope of their recovering their organization in some time. Add to this the other report that the volunteers have massacred several merchants at Santiago de Cuba, and that the foreign Consuls had protested against it; and that the volunteers had threatened to burn the Aldama palace if the Government did not immediately send it to the Casino Espanol, and you can form a pretty fair idea of the untruthful rumors which are now so abundantly circulated by either party, and which requires no small degree of care to guard against being deceived by them. QUASIMODO.

Reports from Revolutionary Sources—Effects of the Spanish Conscription—Dissatisfaction of the Slaves—Their Demands—A Rising Imminent—Successes of the Cuban Arms.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18.—Letters from Cuba to the 9th give encouraging accounts of the hopes and situation of the revolutionary forces. The recent general conscription ordered by DE RODAS at the command of the volunteer Ayuntamiento at Havana, it is said, has the effect of largely increasing their forces. The order gives great satisfaction to the Cuban leaders, who report themselves prepared for active field operations. The feeling of discontent and insubordination among the slaves is reported to be increasing and they are now beyond control. They demand their freedom and exact from the Spanish Government their liberty as declared by the Cespedes Government; and, denied this, they are organizing and arming themselves for the purpose of joining the Cuban army. Several contests have taken place between the negroes and the Spanish troops. The negroes successfully defended themselves even against superior forces.

General QUESADA has had severe skirmishes with portions of the forces of LESCA, and reports that his forces have been successful and have taken a number of prisoners, who are held as prisoners of war; and that the desertions and voluntary enlistments from the enemy have greatly increased his force. In a week or ten days he expects to take possession of Nuevitas and have control of a fortified town on the coast. General JORDAN'S army is being gradually reinforced by Cubans conscripted, whose sympathies are with their countrymen. The Spanish forces in his district are inactive, and he is confident that everything is working right for Cuban independence, and that in a short time his recruits will be organized and made effective, and that the few positions held by VALMASEDA in his department will fall into his hands. Both of the Generals-Commanding, and the President of the Republic of Cuba, express the most positive belief that the revolution will be successful, if not by the force of arms by the force of circumstances.

Skirmishes and Reported Spanish Victories—Sailing of Steamers.

HAVANA, Aug. 18.—Captain MARCOS recently attacked near Jaguey Grande, a force of rebels, 300 strong, who came from the jurisdiction of Cienfuegos. After a short fight the rebels were dispersed with a loss of ten killed.

A detachment of troops accompanying a train of provisions along the South coast to Ciego Avila, was attacked on the road by the insurgents and compelled to fall back, suffering some loss, but saving the train. Reinforcements arriving the troops again advanced, attacked the insurgents and succeeded in reaching Ciego with their convoy.

The steamer Missouri, from New-York, arrived to-night. The steamer Washington sailed to-day for St. Nazaire, and the steamer Liberty for Baltimore.

The Gettysburg Gathering—Departures from this City.

A party of distinguished citizens will leave this City, from the foot of Liberty-street, next Monday, at 9 A. M. and 3 P. M., vid Allentown and Harrisburg, to attend the great reunion at Gettysburg. The military escorting will be headed by Generals Slocum, Wright, Newton, Howe, Brewster, Stannard, Leonard, Benedict, Webb, Tilton, Martin, Ingalls, Hunt, Ward, Graham, Carr, Lock, Tremain, Hall, Dickinson, Greene, Devereux, Shaler, Neill, Gates, Fowler, Robinson, and, it is expected, General (Professor) Eustis, of Cambridge, and General (Governor) Chamberlain of Maine, and others. These Generals will be accompanied by their staff, field and line officers, and in several instances full regimental delegations from their old commands. JAMES WALKER, Esq., the historical painter, will be one of the party. Generals SLOCUM, GRAHAM, STANNARD and others will be accompanied by their wives and friends.

Delegations from the interior of this State, from Boston and other New-England cities will join the party at the foot of Liberty-street. A portion of the excursion will take the 3 P. M. Sunday evening train, and others will follow on Tuesday. This will divide the travel and obviate a crowd. At Hanover Junction they will be joined by parties from Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington, headed by Generals MEADE, HOWARD, HUMPHREYS, and a score of others. Arrangements have been perfected for free return tickets, except between Harrisburg and Hanover Junction, (forty miles,) which can be secured at the general office of the Central Railroad of New-Jersey, No. 141 Liberty-street, New-York, and are good on any train until the 1st of September next. General officers of the battle of Gettysburg will receive free transportation tickets by applying to Colonel JOHN B. BATCHELDER, No. 39 Beekman-street, New-York. Applications should be made before noon of the 20th, as he starts on the evening train for Gettysburg.

All persons presenting printed invitations from Hon. D. MCCOURADGNY, Secretary of the Gettysburg Memorial Association, will be passed free over the Hanover Branch and Gettysburg Railroads, and the Pennsylvania Central and Reading Railroads.

ARREST OF GENERAL DIX.

John Mitchel, the "Irish Patriot," Seeking Revenge for His Imprisonment for Disloyalty—He Claims Damages in $25,000 for False Imprisonment.

While in command of the Department of the Atlantic in 1864, General JNO. A. DIX caused the arrest of JOHN MITCHELL, who first became known to the American people as a fugitive "Irish Patriot," and afterward during the rebellion as a writer of violent and vituperative articles against the North in a Richmond paper. He was committed to Fort Lafayette. After two days' imprisonment in Fort Lafayette he was transferred to Fortress Monroe, where he was kept in confinement about four months. He has now commenced an action against General DIX for the aforesaid imprisonment, laying his damages at $25,000. The following is the affidavit setting forth the grounds of his action, on which Judge MCCUNN issued an order for the arrest of General DIX:

SUPERIOR COURT OF THE CITY OF NEW-YORK.—John Mitchel, plaintiff, vs. John A. Dix, defendant.—JOHN MITCHEL, the plaintiff above named, being duly sworn, says: That during the several times hereinafter mentioned he was, and is now, a citizen of the State of New-York and of the United States of America; that heretofore, and on or about the 14th day of June, 1864, at the City of New-York aforesaid, the said defendant maliciously and with the intent to injure the plaintiff, by force took him (the plaintiff) into custody and unlawfully confined him at the City of New-York aforesaid, and compelled him to go on board a vessel under the control and command of him (the defendant) at the City of New-York aforesaid, such boat or vessel being then at that place, and the defendant imprisoned and retained in close confinement this plaintiff for the space of two days, and from thence this plaintiff, by command of said defendant, was taken to Fortress Monroe, in the State of Virginia, and further restrained of his liberty for the further period of four months and fourteen days, making in all four months and sixteen days, without reasonable cause and without any right or authority so to do, whereby the plaintiff was not only injured in body and mind, but also was injured in his credit and reputation, and was also prevented from attending to his necessary business during that time; that by said imprisonment his family were deprived of their means of livelihood and support, and subjected to great privation and distress; that at Fortress Monroe he was confined in a casemate without liberty to take outdoor exercise or to read any book except the Bible, or to converse with his fellow-prisoners, or even to smoke for the first month of said confinement, and thereafter only a common pipe; that the provisions furnished him were unclean, unwholesome and unfit for use; that in two months he was prostrated by sickness and seldom able to arise from his bed; that by day and by night an armed sentinel, with fixed bayonet, paced his beat backward and forward in his prison casemate.

After such confinement for two months, he was informed by his attendant physician that he was dying—then, for the first time, he was furnished with wholesome food and permitted to take outdoor exercise.

That he has never been informed or in any way apprised of the offence for which he was arrested and subjected to such harsh treatment, by reason of all which he has been subjected to great damage, to wit, the sum of $25,000. That the plaintiff has commenced an action against the defendant upon the cause of action above stated. JOHN MITCHEL.

Sworn to before me this 10th day of July, 1869. DOUGLAS A. LEVIEN, Notary Public, New-York City.

General DIX having been taken into custody by Sheriff O'BRIEN, executed the following undertaking and was released:

SUPERIOR COURT.—John Mitchel, plaintiff, vs. John A. Dix, defendant.—The above-named defendant, JOHN A. DIX, having been arrested by JAMES O'BRIEN, the Sheriff of the City and County of New-York, upon an order to him granted by Hon. JOHN H. MCCUNN, in a certain action commenced in the above-named Court by the above-named plaintiff against the above-named defendant,

We, JOHN A. DIX, of No. 2 West Twenty-first-street, in the City of New-York, by occupation gentleman, and JOHN J. CISCO, of No. 126 Fifth-avenue, in the City of New-York, by occupation banker, and MOSES TAYLOR, of No. 122 Fifth-avenue, banker, hereby undertake in the sum of $20,000 that the above-named defendant, arrested as aforesaid, shall at all times render himself amenable to the process of said Court during such action and to such as may be issued to enforce judgment therein. JOHN A. DIX, JOHN J. CISCO, MOSES TAYLOR.

In the report of the affair that appeared in an evening journal it was stated that H. E. TALLMADGE acted as MITCHEL'S counsel. The following note relieves him of the imputation:

NEW-YORK, Wednesday, Aug. 18, 1869.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

If you should notice accounts of arrest of General DIX at suit of JOHN MITCHEL, Esq., please correct statement that the plaintiff was represented by H. E. TALLMADGE, Esq., counsel, such not being the fact, and published without authority. Very respectfully, ROGER J. PAGE, Plaintiff's Attorney.

THE PUBLIC HEALTH.

Vital Statistics of the Cities of New-York and Brooklyn for the Past Week—Comparison with Those of Previous Years.

According to the report of the Register of Vital Statistics, presented to the Board of Health yesterday, it appears that during the week that ended on Saturday, the 14th inst., there were 507 deaths in New-York and 226 in Brooklyn. The rate of mortality continued steadily to decrease, as in the preceding three weeks. The mean temperature was 78.6° Fahrenheit, or 2.19° warmer than in the previous week. Thus the Summer is closing warmer than usual, but with unusual promise of healthfulness. The Midsummer period of four weeks, from the middle of July to the middle of August, has not been marked by excessive heat, but the steady warmth and moisture render it necessary to urge the duty of cleansing and disinfecting all foul or crowded districts. Most of the City inhabitants evince an intelligent regard for this sanitary duty, complying promptly with the directions of the sanitary officers.

The subjoined table correctly compares the mortality records of the two cities in four successive years, and will be studied with interest by all who feel interested in the public health:

NEW-YORK.

Mortality second week in August,	1866.	1867.	1868.	1869.
Total number of deaths	548	708	563	507
Infants under one year	209	264	200	212
Infants under five years	413	494	412	372
From zymotic causes	201	267	216	170

BROOKLYN.

Mortality second week in August,	1866.	1867.	1868.	1869.
Total number of deaths	228	237	237	226
Infants under one year	135	139	144	97
Infants under five years	177	203	185	145
From zymotic causes	139	152	139	106

The following statistics show that there is still a great waste of human life at this season of the year, for not half of the 212 infants that died in New-York last week and the 97 in Brooklyn should have perished:

NEW-YORK.

Annual death-rate per 1,000, (population estimated at 1,200,000)	22.00
Percentage of zymotic diseases on total mortality	47.03
Percentage of diarrhœal diseases on total mortality	24.22
Percentage of diarrhœal diseases on zymotic diseases	51.48
Percentage of first year of life on total mortality	32.13
Percentage of five years of life on total mortality	42.64

BROOKLYN.

Annual death-rate per 1,000, (population estimated at 370,000)	31.76
Percentage of zymotic diseases on total mortality	46.46
Percentage of diarrhœal diseases on total mortality	32.32
Percentage of diarrhœal diseases on zymotic diseases	70.19
Percentage of first year of life on total mortality	38.49
Percentage of first five years of life on total mortality	61.18

The death-rates in New-York and Brooklyn continue to be less than those of Vienna and Berlin, which, at the end of July, were thirty-one and thirty-nine per 1,000 yearly. But Paris and London continued to have a death-rate of less than twenty-five per 1,000 throughout the month of July.

Accidental Death.

On Sunday night last a son of CHRISTOPHER SCHAEFFER, of Jamaica, Long Island, accidentally fell down stairs, and sustained such severe injuries as to confine him to his bed until Tuesday, when he died.

Kings County Citizens' Reform Association.

An adjourned meeting of the citizens of Brooklyn was held in the Salesroom, Phœnix building, Court-Street, last evening, Ex-Judge MORSE in the chair, for the purpose of perfecting the organization of a Citizens' Association for the reform of abuses existing in the Government of the City of Brooklyn and the County of Kings.

The Chairman reported a constitution which set forth that the name of the organization should be "The Citizens' Reform Association of the County of Kings;" that the object of the Association should be to secure the selection of honest and capable men for public office, and to urge forward by all means in its power such measures as should insure the supremacy of the people in local affairs and to secure a direct and personal responsibility of office-holders to the people, whose business and interests they represent and have in charge, and that the Association should cordially invite all those in the respective wards and towns of the county who sympathize with its objects, to form auxiliary ward and town associations to cooperate in carrying forward the purposes contemplated by its organization.

The constitution as reported, after much disorderly discussion, was adopted.

It was resolved to go into an election for officers on Wednesday, the 25th inst.

The committee to whom was delegated the nominating of suitable persons for officers of the Association declined to report names which they had prepared on the ground that it would be indelicate to name gentlemen whose names might be rejected by the meeting.

Mr. CHURCH wanted to know who were members of the Association before officers were named.

This led to the signing of the following document and the Constitution:

"We, the undersigned citizens, agree that we are imperatively called upon to take some steps that may prove beneficial in the present corrupt state of our municipal affairs. We heartily join hands with all honest men, irrespective of party, in the organization and support of the Citizens' Municipal Reform Association of the County of Kings, pledging ourselves to aid the Association, both in the selection of good men for public office, and in giving them our support at the ballot-box."

The meeting then adjourned.
